Mass Picketing Resumes At Newspaper Building

PORTLAND (UPI)—A group of about 30 pickets marched square style in front of the Journal Building for more than two hours Monday.

Police sent extra officers to the scene and at one point a paddy wagon was sent for, but no arrests were made and no violence was reported.

The newspaper has been struck since last Nov. 10, along with the Oregonian. Both have continued to publish.

Among the police on hand was Chief William Hilbruner.

Some persons entering the building reported name-calling. The pickets appeared about 6:30 a.m. and remained until after 8 a.m.

When they dispersed, leaving the usual four or five pickets at the building.

Earlier, Mayor Terry Schunk banned mass picketing. Large groups of women since have defied the ban, but this was the first time in months that numbers of men have been on the picket line.

Trial Postponed

ROSEBURG (AP)—Trial of the first of many suits filed in circuit court here as a result of an explosion which leveled a big area here last August and killed 13 persons, has been put off. It had been scheduled to start Monday.

The suit is one in which Alvin Kuykendall asks $150,000 damages from Pacific Powder Co., whose truckload of explosives blew up. His wife and young daughter were killed.

The case now is tentatively scheduled for trial in September. The delay was ascribed to a motion filed in federal court by insurance companies covering Pacific Powder in which they asked that their liability be defined and limited.

Bullet Kills Boy

ROSEBURG (AP)—A young boy from Toledo, Ore., was killed Sunday night by a bullet from his brother's 22 caliber rifle.

The fatally wounded boy was Richard Warren Prummer, 13, son of George Prummer.

State police said he was visiting relatives at Glide, east of here, and was playing near where his brother, George Loren, was shooting at birds with a 22 rifle.

Suddenly one shot hit and felled the boy.

He served two terms on the Salem city council.

Court Sees Constitutional Issue in Union Dues Case

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court Monday called for reargument next term of an appeal involving the question of whether it is unconstitutional to require a worker to join a union if part of his dues money is used to support political objectives he opposes.

In calling for new arguments next fall, the court in an order said the U.S. attorney general had not been advised formally that the constitutionality of a section of the Railway Labor Act was at issue.

The court certified to the attorney general that there is a constitutional issue in the case.

The appeal on which action was deferred was taken to the high tribunal by a group of unions. They appealed from a Georgia Supreme Court ruling that a union shop provision of the Railway Labor Act violates constitutional rights of workers.

Six veteran employees of the Southern Railway System who did not want to join unions protested in Georgia courts against paying union dues when part of the money was used for political purposes and to aid doctrines the workers opposed.

Under union shop agreements, workers are required to join unions within a specific time if they wish to hold their jobs. In the Georgia railroad case the time limit was 60 days.

Georgia courts ordered unions to return to complaining railway employees the dues they paid under protest and under threat of losing their jobs. The state courts also barred enforcement of two union shop contracts involved in the case.

The Georgia Supreme Court, upholding contentions of the six employees, said: "One who is compelled to contribute the fruits of his labor to support or promote political or economic programs or support candidates for public office is just as much deprived of his freedom of speech as if he were compelled to give his vocal support to doctrines he opposes."

The Georgia court found dues money was used extensively to help candidates at the federal, state and local levels.

In another case, the court decided old age benefits payable under the Social Security Act may be cut off from an alien deported in 1956 because of Communist Party membership. Justice Harlan delivered the 5-4 decision. Chief Justice Warren and Justices Black, Douglas and Brennan dissented.

The ruling applied specifically to Ephram Nestor, now in Sofia, Bulgaria. He came to the United States in 1913 and worked in jobs covered by Social Security from December 1936 to January 1955.

Upon reaching retirement age in November, 1955, he was awarded a pension of $55.60 monthly. He was deported in July of 1956 on the ground of Communist Party membership from 1933 to 1939. In September 1956, the Social Security Administration cut off Nestor's pension.

Nestor sued for restoration and won a ruling by U.S. Dist. Judge Edward A. Tamm.

The Justice Department appealed.

COSTS

Caught in the cost-squeeze? Think there's no end to the inflationary spiral? Sixty-four top representatives of government, labor, business and education concluded at a recent meeting of the American Assembly that we can look forward to dynamic growth, low unemployment and reasonably stable prices. However, these goals will be reached only if all Americans join together to assure a steady rise in productivity.
