

Goldberg Confers On Airline Strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Kennedy stepped into the nation's worst airlines tieup Tuesday and ordered Secretary of Labor Arthur Goldberg to undertake new federal action to end the wildcat strike of flight engineers.

The strike has grounded three major airlines, and three others maintained only token service. According to industry estimates, the tieup was costing the airlines $5 million a day.

Sen. George Smathers, D-Fla., revealed in Washington that Kennedy had transmitted some "new and original" ideas on how to obtain a strike settlement to Goldberg, who summoned President Ron Brown of the Flight Engineers Union to a conference.

White House press secretary Pierre Salinger confirmed that Kennedy had ordered new efforts by Goldberg but said the President was not taking a personal hand in the matter.

From Page One

Technology

but it cannot end the threat of destructive warfare.

Man needs a sense of fulfillment that he can find only for himself, although "science may give you some gadgets to help."

"There is not a crucial issue that can be solved by science."

A population that is increasing at a fantastic and dangerous rate was cited as one of the world's really crucial issues.

"We are surely going to be eaten out of house and home." But science is not in a position to stop the population explosion because too many religious, moral, economic and political questions are involved.

What is needed, he suggested, is "education that leads people to understand the nature of growth."

Kusch was critical of the large sums that have been spent on space exploration.

"I think the exploration of space is something man should undertake," he said. "Quite possibly he may learn things that will be valuable to man . . . but intense crash programs are a little senseless and thoroughly extravagant."

"A more temperate approach would be ultimately much more useful," he said.

Some of the money now going into the space program could be spent more wisely, he suggested, noting, "That kind of dough would go a long way toward improving American educational enterprise."

"Education not only has not kept pace, in some respects it has even lagged behind."

Discussing the relationship between the scientist and the layman Kusch said a gap does exist.

"The layman lacks a feeling for the nature of science — what you can expect it to do, and what you cannot expect it to do," he said.

Another illusion, he said, is the belief that "You scientists got us into this mess; you get us out."

Kusch described this attitude as "nonsense."

"All I know is some nuclear physics. These are social decisions."

From Page One

Dunes Bill

authorized by a bill both Morse and her late husband sponsored giving condemnation power to the Secretary of the Interior.

Morse claims there are many parks in which private property remains intact within park boundaries. He said the guiding principle on the question of exercising eminent domain is clear public necessity — in some instances only through condemnation can land be acquired for a park; but in other instances, such as the Oregon Coast, with its abundance of public or state land, there is no necessity to condemn.

"The important thing, from a recreational standpoint, is to get the park established," Morse said. "Let's do it without giving the secretary the power of eminent domain, and then see what happens. If it can then be demonstrated that the public necessity demands condemnation of private property, this power can always be granted by Congress later. But there is no reason to go all the way immediately when it may not be necessary."

Morse said he thought a good compromise bill might contain some zoning code requirements, but he did not favor giving the Secretary of the Interior the authority to approve or disapprove zoning codes as the criterion for determining whether to exercise eminent domain.

Rep. Edwin R. Durno, the new Republican congressman in whose district the park would be located, had not had a chance to examine the new bill before it was introduced Monday. He has previously expressed general opposition to the idea.

(ADVERTISEMENT)

YOUR CHILD MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS

1 OUT OF 3 DOES

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms... ugly parasites that medical experts say infect 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it. To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do... and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved, ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge... small, easy-to-take tablets... special sizes for children and adults.

Officers of the union were ordered to appear in the same court Monday to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for continuing the strike despite a court order.

More than 75,000 airlines employees were furloughed Monday. Trans World Airlines, American Airlines and Eastern Air Lines rolled all their planes into hangars and shut down completely.

Pan American, National Airlines and Western Airlines were as good as closed down with up to 85 per cent of their employees laid off and only a token number of planes flying.

An estimated 150,000 travelers in waiting rooms across the country discovered their airline tickets were useless except for refunds. Air service also was threatened. Only one airline—United—was still flying a coast-to-coast route. Only one—North-east—still had normal service between New York and Florida points.

The walkout began Friday in a wage dispute with Pan American but spread over a different issue—a National Mediation Board ruling that flight engineers for United Air Lines from a single bargaining unit with the pilots.

The flight engineers maintain that the order threatens the existence of their 3,500-man union.

A seventh major airline, Northwest, has been crippled for a month by a strike of engineers belonging to a different union.

Under Straub's bill; beach easements issued by the board could be taken to court and challenged.

Also, notice of a public hearing on a request affecting a beach would have to be published in two newspapers once a week for four weeks. One paper would be in the affected county and the other of general circulation through the state.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

The government announced only the arrest of Col. Jose Edito Ramirez, accused of leading the abortive uprising, but reliable sources said others arrested included at least 30 civilians and a Roman Catholic priest.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

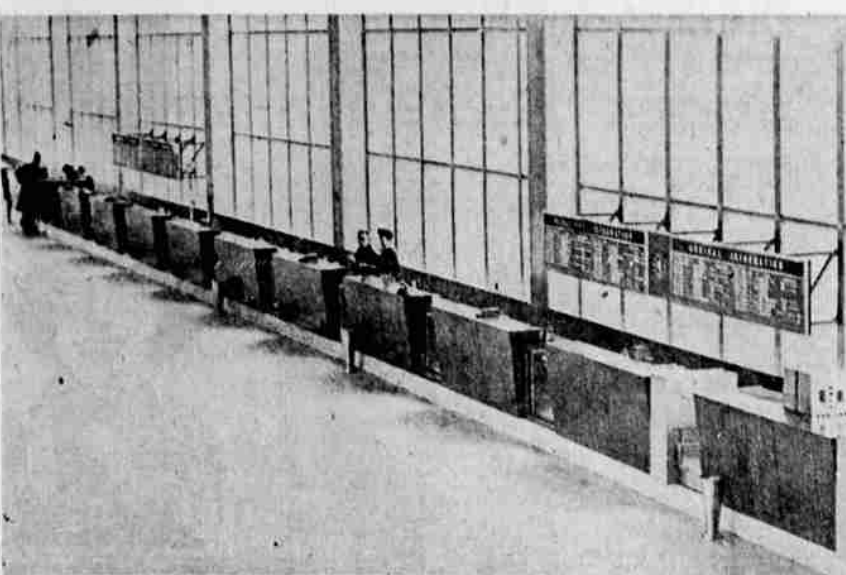

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

STRIKEBOUND AIRPORT — Ticket counters at New York's Idlewild airport were deserted except for employees Monday as a result of the tieup caused by a wildcat strike of flight engineers, now in its fifth day. Strike has curtailed operations of at least six major airlines. (AP Wirephoto)

Beach Bill Out Of Committee

SALEM (UPI) — The Senate Rules Committee has cleared for introduction a bill that would make future beach easements granted by the Oregon Land Board subject to a court review.

The rules committee cleared the bill Monday afternoon. Sen. Robert Straub, D-Eugene, is introducing it.

The requirement would be effective after the land board grants two easements to International Paper Co. for a pulp mill at Gardiner.

The bills won final legislative approval Monday and went to the governor. One of the bills allows the company to run a waste-carrying pipeline under the beach and out to sea.

Under Straub's bill; beach easements issued by the board could be taken to court and challenged.

Also, notice of a public hearing on a request affecting a beach would have to be published in two newspapers once a week for four weeks. One paper would be in the affected county and the other of general circulation through the state.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

Tshombe Orders Mobilization In Congo's Katanga Province

ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, (UPI)—Katanga President Moise Tshombe ordered general mobilization Tuesday to defend his Congo province against a "declaration of war" by the United Nations.

He also barred all foreigners from leaving the country, apparently in an attempt to nullify a U.N. order for all foreign and military advisers to get out of the Congo. He said the frontiers will be closed if necessary to prevent foreigners from leaving.

Tshombe's order calling up all black and white inhabitants for defense of his mineral-rich land was announced in a broadcast over Elisabethville radio.

It came a few hours after the U. N. Security Council in New York adopted a resolution empowering secretary-general Dag Hammarskjöld to use force if necessary to prevent civil war in the Congo.

Tshombe preceded his radio order with an appeal at a news conference to all African members of the U. N. to press for postponement of any move to carry out the Security Council resolution. He also called for a conference of all Congolese leaders to be held in Geneva March 6.

Officer Thomas Keating, in police headquarters when the tremor struck, said it "rumbled to a peak. It started slightly at first and then clinched to a climax in about 30 seconds."

Fontana is about 50 miles east of Los Angeles on U.S. 66.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

State Political Parties' Power Would Be Curbed by Boivin Bill

SALEM (UPI) — An attempt to curb the power of Oregon's political parties and their officers was launched Tuesday with introduction of a bill by the Senate Elections Committee.

The bill, endorsed by Senate President Harry Boivin, would prohibit state party conventions from endorsing any candidates. The conventions also would be barred from trying to influence any party member from exercising his own judgment in regard to ballot measures, candidates, selections of public officers and legislative action.

It also would prevent any party officer, including the national committeemen and committeewomen, from seeking any elective public office. It would not affect present office holders during their current terms.

The Democratic state chairman, Robert W. Straub of Eugene, is a member of the Oregon Senate.

The bill is the aftermath of the 1959 Democratic state convention. It attempted to bind Democratic state senators to support Sen. Alfred H. Corbett, D-Portland, in his race for president of the Senate. Boivin, also a Democrat, was elected with the support of Republicans and some Democrats, although Corbett had the support of a majority of the Senate Democrats.

A bill has been introduced in the House which would have the state party conventions elect delegates to national party conventions, and also make nominations for national committeemen and committeewomen.

The new measure provides that the commission would appoint the welfare administrator, with the consent of the governor. But only the administrator could remove the administrator.

The commission now has the sole power to appoint and remove the administrator.

AMENDMENT OFFERED

Sen. R. F. Chapman, R-Coos Bay, introduced a proposed constitutional amendment providing that appointees to elective offices must be of the same political party as the person who vacated the office. This now is the law, but putting it in the Constitution would make it impossible for the Legislature to change it.

The House Fish and Game Committee introduced a bill to prohibit removal of sand and gravel from fish spawning areas without notice to the Fish and Game Commissions then would work out plan to see that the fish were not damaged.

A bill by Rep. Arthur P. Ireland, R-Forest Grove, would appropriate $10 million to be given to the counties to reduce property taxes.

And a new measure by Rep. Kessler, R. Cannon, R-Bend, authorizes state agencies to revoke licenses because of false or misleading advertising.

TONITE ON CHANNEL 9 News Nine

Blast, Glow Are Reported

State police early Tuesday received a report of a loud explosion and a bright glow in the sky heard and seen by residents of the Cedar Flats area east of Springfield.

State police and the Lane County Sheriff's office sent cars to investigate the reports, but they were unable to find the source or cause.

Harvey Hilton of 8990 McKenzie Highway called state police about 4:15 a.m. He said he and his wife and several neighbors had been awakened by the blast.

A bright glow was visible in the sky to the southeast, apparently somewhere in the Jasper area, Hilton said. The glow slowly faded away, he said.

Federal Aviation Authorities at Mahlon Sweet Field north of Eugene said they had received no reports of planes down or overdue in the area.

Bread Price Raised

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The Communist government has ordered a 10 per cent increase in the price of bread in Belgrade.

Death March Suits Dismissed

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (UPI) — Federal District Judge Albert Bryan dismissed Monday three damage suits totaling $600,000 which arose from the 1956 "death march" of a Marine Corps platoon at Parris Island, S. C.

The suits were filed by the families of three of the six Marine recruits who were drowned when the training march led through Ribbon Creek. Bryan said the defendants, including former Marine Commandant Gen. Randolph Pate and 15 subordinates, were not liable to civil suit because of an official action.

The suits were filed by the families of Jerry Lamonte Thomas, 17, Fairfax County, Va.; Norman A. Wood, 17, Bay Shore, Long Island, N. Y., and Leroy Thompson, 18, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Happy Wild Duck

BARIE, Ont. (UPI)—A happy wild duck is monopolizing the Robert Petrie family bathtub. The Petries picked up the small nearly frozen bird, thawed it out and found it wouldn't eat until put into tub, where it quacks up a meal every half hour. The three small Petrie daughters are delighted.

60 Arrested After Revolt

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Venezuelan authorities reportedly have rounded up 60 military men and civilians after nipping a miniature revolt against the government of President Romulo Betancourt.

The government announced only the arrest of Col. Jose Edito Ramirez, accused of leading the abortive uprising, but reliable sources said others arrested included at least 30 civilians and a Roman Catholic priest.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.

Police also routed about 150 youthful followers of leftist leader Juan Pablo Crespo who tried to join in a labor demonstration called in support of Betancourt's government.

The informant said the priest was the Rev. Simon Salvatierra and that it was he who announced over a local radio station that the armed forces had taken over power.