

THE TIME, GOVERNOR? — The watch on the left hand tells Governor Mark Hatfield what time it is according to Pacific Standard Time. On the right hand, he has Daylight Saving Time. But which is the right time? Governor Hatfield Saturday dramatized the time confusion in Oregon while visiting the Florence Rhododendron festival. Businessmen and city officials in Oregon communities are debating whether their towns will switch to daylight saving time.

Richards Concerned

council staff's recommendations will weigh heavily in the legislature's decisions.

• To make detailed analyses of events and situations affecting higher education within the state. Richards cited as an example a study of the economic and social growth of California, and how this growth might effect such things as construction of new institutions or expansion of older ones.

• Also in the research line, a continuing study of the physical plants of the higher education institutions with an analysis of the use of each and its relation to future needs.

• Development of an adult higher education program for the state.

California is moving toward a selective admissions policy that will place a much greater emphasis on its junior college system, Richards said. "This means that by far the majority of students in ten years will be in junior colleges," he said.

Richards said he felt the junior college is one of the answers to the Oregon higher education system's growing pains. "I've always said that Oregon should give more attention toward the development of a community college," he said. He cited the "opportunity to more students for a college education" as another factor in such development.

The 51-year-old Richards has been Oregon chancellor since 1955. Before that he was vice chancellor for two years under interim Chancellor Charles D. Byrne.

He served previously as assistant to the executive vice chancellor and director of research for New York University, and held other positions as special assistant to the secretary of the army, at Wayne University, and in the navy. He holds BA and MS degrees from Pennsylvania State College, and a Ph.D. in business administration from the University of Chicago.

While admittedly critical of the position of higher education vis-a-vis the legislature in Oregon, Richards repeated a previous statement that it was not dissatisfaction with the system here that prompted his move to California. It's more the idea of taking on a bigger job, he said, moving from a state with some 25,000 students in higher education to one with some 250,000.

"I feel that it is a task that assumes national importance because of the size of the job and the wealth of the state," he said. "I think the California position is such a massively compelling responsibility that no matter what the situation might be in Oregon, my decision would be the same."

Task Force

"Hit 'em, hit 'em again." The women flailed away with their purses and their hands. A white man tried to protect the two women. The men attacked him, clubbed him to the ground, kicked him, and left him lying motionless and bloody on the ground.

Horace Cort, an Associated Press photographer, said he saw two members of the racially integrated group try to outrun a huge crowd of the roaring attackers.

The white men caught them, knocked them to the ground and jumped up and down on them, Cort said.

He said an ambulance pulled into the area. Somebody in the mob of white men shouted, and part of the mob started after the ambulance. The driver roared away.

Joe Howard Dies On Stage

CHICAGO (AP)—Joe Howard, 79, vaudeville star who wrote more than 500 songs including "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," died on the stage of the Civic Opera House Friday night while doing a benefit performance.

The famous song and dance man, who made his home in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., had just finished singing an encore featuring some of his hits when he was stricken.

The curtain closed and some in the audience were unaware the collapse was not part of the act. But his wife Miriam and a number of doctors in the audience rushed back stage where he was pronounced dead.

Death came in the city where Howard wrote many of his song hits and musical comedies in the early 1900s. Mrs. Howard remarked later "what a glorious way to die—in the town where he first made it big."

The veteran performer marked his 50th anniversary in show business in 1949.

Eugene Students Win Scholarships

PORTLAND, Ore. (Special)—Two students from Eugene have won scholarships for the 1961-62 academic year at the University of Oregon Medical School and University of Oregon School of Nursing, according to Dr. David Baird, dean.

Gary M. Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milo M. Stewart and a freshman medical student, is recipient of a Pohl Memorial Scholarship, a cash award, endowed in 1936 by Dr. Esther Pohl Lovejoy in memory of her husband and son.

Sue Carol Budd, nursing student and daughter of Mrs. Bernice V. Budd of 1185 W. 25th, Eugene, received a state scholarship for tuition for three terms.

Stewart, a 1953 graduate of Eugene High School, received his premedical education at the University of Oregon.

Nielsen to Head Assn. of Counties

Kenneth Nielsen, Lane County commissioner, has been named president of the Assn. of Oregon Counties, succeeding James Harrison of Coos County.

Harrison will resign as county judge of Coos County in August. Nielsen, who has been a county commissioner here since 1953, was appointed by the association's executive committee.

He is currently chairman of the Lane County Board of Commissioners.

Coburg Baby Dies Saturday Morning

Shane Woodson Cowles, six-week-old son of Sandra Cowles, 112 W. Bruce Way, Coburg, died at home early Saturday morning.

Dr. Harold T. Osterud, Lane County health officer, said that the death was from natural causes. An autopsy is being performed.

The baby is survived by his mother, his father, Robert Cowles, and a fourteen-month-old sister.

Blaze Damages Interior of Auto

The interior of a car owned by Richard G. Bolin, of 298 Blair Blvd., was extensively damaged by fire early Saturday morning, according to Eugene firemen.

Firemen said they did not determine the cause of the blaze, which originated in the front seat. The car was parked at Bolin's home.

Boom Seen For Western Wood Uses

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP)—Substantial expansion of the West's forest products industries in the next 15 years is forecast by two Washington State University economists.

John A. Guthrie, director of WSU's Bureau of Economic and Business Research, directed a four-year study, with George R. Armstrong as co-author.

Assuming the economy of the United States and Canada continues to expand at a rate similar to the last two or three decades, this is the Guthrie-Armstrong prediction:

• Lumber production in the western states and in British Columbia — approximately 25 billion board feet in 1959—will rise 40 per cent, to 35 billion feet, by 1975.

• Output of pulp and paper mills in the western states, Alaska and British Columbia will nearly double by 1975.

• Softwood plywood production will increase substantially. By 1975, the economists say, it could be nearly double the 1959 figure.

Guthrie and Armstrong said, "The over-all picture is one of continued and substantial expansion based on solid foundation of extensive softwood forests."

The study was financed by Resources for the Future, Inc., a non-profit organization in Washington, D.C., and the report has been published in book form.

Attorney Donates Scholarship Fund

Herbert B. Gallon, a Portland attorney and member of the 1938 graduating class of the University of Oregon Law School, has donated a scholarship to the school.

Orlando J. Hollis, Dean of the Law School, announced that the scholarship is for $200 annually. It is to go to a second-year student for use during his third year.

The recipient of the award will have to show academic excellence, will have to provide articles for the Oregon Law Review and show an interest in the field of labor law as evidenced by writings published in the review.

HUP-TWO-THREE — U.S. Army Capt. Stanley T. Adams of Eugene, Marshall of the Armed Forces Day parade, reviews local armed forces units Saturday as more than 1,500 marchers including the Oregon Army National Guard unit, top, photo, put on a full dress show. Captain Adams is deputy director of the 12th Marine Corps Reserve and Recruitment District of San Francisco and holder of the Medal of Honor.
