Grouped Pictures Add Charm to Rooms

Stop hanging pictures on walls so that they look like misplaced postage stamps. Improperly hung pictures will create havoc in a room setting quicker than you can say "Modigliani."

Probably the commonest fault in hanging pictures, reports the Picture and Frame Institute, is to place one small picture on a big wall. Needless to say, you'll soon need a pair of binoculars to locate that cherished art masterpiece.

The best way of solving the picture hanging problem is to take stock of your present assets. You'll probably discover that you have quite a few small pictures scattered around the room.

Stifle that tendency to leave them where they are because you can't stand a bare wall, and plan instead to group the pictures together on one wall.

Whereas one picture on a wall can be a liability, a grouping of several pictures can be a striking decorative asset. Keep in mind, however, that the success of most picture groupings depends on how well they are designed in relation to the furniture.

Heavy pieces of furniture or a large furniture grouping require a large picture grouping to create balance. More delicate groupings, with fewer pictures, work well in small wall areas with lightly scaled furniture, advises the Picture and Frame Institute.

Don't worry about the subject matters of the pictures being in keeping with the room decor or even with each other. Framed pictures are meant to be accents and some of the most effective accents are those that are highlighted by contrast.

And remember, if those other blank walls suddenly appear too blank, you can always fill them with picture groupings of some of your favorite reproductions.

Hints From Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have literally ruined my favorite orlon sweater by carelessly tossing it in the washing machine with other clothes, and now it has little black knots all over it. They will not brush off. Can you help me?

HOMEMAKER

Dear Mrs. Lewton: It might make you feel good to know that many people make this mistake. Just not being the only one helps, doesn't it?

Well, the only answer we have is to take your husband's razor and CAREFULLY shave 'em off! Lots of people shave sweaters!

Now . . . I don't push advice down anyone's throat, but I do send a hint this time. (After I got knots on my own sweater!) I have learned to turn a sweater wrong-side-out and button it up before ever washing it. Thus, the outside doesn't rub against other materials, which causes these knots.

HELOISE

Dear Heloise: An easy way to keep socks together when washing or to keep straps from wrapping themselves around everything in the washing machine, and to protect all lingerie, is to put these "trouble makers" in a bag made very simply of two dish cloths.

Buy the type of dish cloths that are made of loosely woven threads. Such a cloth lets plenty of suds and rinse water get inside.

To make the bag, stitch two cloths together on three sides so that it will look like a sack. It is usually best to stitch these sides several times so they will be secure.

On the open side (or top of bag) stitch a hem about one inch deep. Turn the bag inside out so that the seams will be on the inside, and run a drawstring through the top. Your washing machine bag is finished, ready for months of service.

Actually, Heloise, it almost takes longer to tell how to make one than the time it takes to make it. I can make a bag during the time it takes for one long TV commercial.

NANCY H.

Dear Folks: I now possess three of these bags. In one I put my nylons from day to day. Each week end I just throw the entire bag in the machine.

Another bag holds husband's sox.

The third bag holds head lettuce! When I am having company for dinner and want the lettuce real crisp, I just dampen the bag and place the head of lettuce in it. It's great. Also absorbs that excess water from the lettuce.

HELOISE

Dear Heloise: After washing my tennis shoes in the washing machine, I spray them with this starch.

This puts a thin film over the cloth and prevents the soil from clinging to the fabric. The insides are still soft and as comfortable as can be.

White Water Parade Woman Pilots Boat Over Rapids

By GAY PAULEY of the United Press International
NEW YORK (UPI)—Dangerous waters always have challenged Georgie White in the same way Mt. Everest always has challenged mountain climbers.

As a result, Mrs. White boasts that she is the first person ever to "run" the rapids and cataracts of the Colorado River without portage.

Today, a lithe, handsome and vigorous woman of 51, she has "lost count" of the number of times she has traversed the Colorado's hazardous course on a 330-mile run from Lee's Ferry, 125 miles north of Flagstaff, Ariz., to Temple Bar, Ariz., where Lake Mead begins.

Mrs. White since 1951 has piloted passenger boat tours on a course which includes about 195 miles of treacherous rapids and cataracts.

"Experts vary in estimating the number of rapids," she continued, in an interview. "They run from 200 to 400. Of course, it depends on what you call a rapid. To me, it has to be a mighty surge of water . . . I know the Colorado so well by now."

Winter Realtor
Mrs. White, the wife of a retired transit worker, lives in Los Angeles during the winter months where she and her sister, a school teacher, operate a real estate business.

From early April through September, however, she is the pilot-navigator of the "Georgie White" boats, which actually are Navy surplus neoprene rafts.

The cruises last either 12 or 17 days, include stops along the way for hiking and overnight camping, and run either the full 330 miles or just the "smooth part" which is Glen Canyon.

Mrs. White is consultant to Johnson Motors on the use of powered craft in rough waters and came to New York this week for the start of the annual National Motor Boat Show.

She said she uses two sizes of rafts. One is nine feet wide, 17 feet long; the other, nine feet wide and 30 feet long. In each case, she hitches three of the rafts together broadside with nylon rope to provide the passengers a safe journey through the formidable waters. She said she never has had an accident.

Shouts Order
"The first day down stream, when we approach the first rapids, I yell, 'Hold on, everybody,' and you can see passengers sitting there frozen . . . wide-eyed and scared," she said.

"After that, they can hardly wait for the next ones."

Mrs. White said, "I think people enjoy this sport because it gets them completely away from everyday problems . . . back to rugged living. And there aren't too many things you can do these days to get away from civilization."

Mrs. White, a native of Chicago, has had few dull moments in her life. During the Depression of the 1930s, she bicycled from New York to Los Angeles "just to see the country." She used to belong to Chicago's Polar Bear Club whose members brave the ice of Lake Michigan for winter swims. She says:

"I always have liked the outdoor life . . . especially the water."

SPECIAL BEAUTY HINTS

Over-doing use of waving lotions or coloring products may have damaged your hair. If so, cream-and-steam it, brush extra long.

Parts that vary in locale by a hairbreadth each day, help avoid strain on your tresses, prevent "fall-out." When setting parts too, moving the rollers a little to one side or the other each setting.

Quick pick-me-up for you and your tresses if they're oily—brush in some of your favorite cologne.

Rinse in highlights, a shining glow with a coloring product that matches or is slightly lighter than your own natural shade. This will also add body to extra-fine hair.

Shampoo as often as necessary to keep your hair clean and flexible, easy to wave.

"Teasing" or back-combing your hair can add body, give the high, smooth line fashionable today. But never "scrub" strands. Use a non-lacquer spray to hold your locks in place, selecting the type that is best for your hair texture.

Victory over too curly hair can be yours by a treatment with a straightening lotion treatment at your beauty parlor. This will last as long as a permanent wave.

Wave your locks with jumbo rollers for a smooth, sophisticated look; smaller rollers for smaller curls; pin curls for ends.

X—is that added something that completes your hair style and complements your beauty: a flower, a bow, a flipped-up wing of a wave, a fringe of bangs, pretty earrings that spray out in a circle of glitter above the ear.

You can do a lot for your scalp by massaging gently with the balls of the fingers to stimulate flow of oils. Zero in on dandruff with special shampoos, fine-combing, a balanced diet.

Many of these beauty helps can be purchased at giant savings during our January Sale.
