

First Step For the first step in making a framed Christmas card picture, select piece of slightly textured fabric to provide an attractive and unusual matting. Cut to fit an 8- by 10-inch piece of heavy cardboard and glue the fabric on board with rubber cement. Inexpensive wooden frames are used to set off the cards.

Third Step Final step in framing Christmas cards and presto, two pretty pictures to hang on the wall. Insert pictures into wooden frames, using plain piece of cardboard for the backing. Seal back with brown paper tape. Attach picture hooks to the frames. If desired, frames may be painted to match one of the colors in the pictures or given gilt finish.

Card Craft

Greetings Turned Into Pictures

Instead of throwing away those Christmas cards you received during the holiday season, select a few of the most attractive ones and frame them to make new pictures for your walls.

All you need to make these elegant, yet inexpensive framed pictures are a few yards of fabric, simple 8"x10" wooden frames purchased at the dime-store, shellac and glue.

Here, from the Picture and Frame Institute are the instructions for making a pair of 8"x10" Christmas card pictures pretty enough to hang in any room in your home.

Select the cards you wish to frame and carefully trim away all excess paper. Cover the cards with shellac, using at least three coats and allowing at least an hour's drying time between coats for the shellac to partially dry.

While the cards are drying, cover two pieces of 8"x10" size heavy cardboard with fabric to form an attractive, textured matting for the cards. (In the accompanying pictures a piece of glosheen was used.) Use rubber cement to attach the fabric to the cardboard.

When the cards are dry, mount them to the fabric-covered boards with rubber cement or, if the cards are printed on very thin paper, the Institute suggests using a thin mixture of flour, water and salt.

When mounting the cards don't forget to leave at least a quarter of an inch more space at the bottom of the board than at the top and sides. This variation in margin width is to compensate for an optical illusion which would make a mat, exactly the same size on all four sides, appear to be narrower at the bottom when hung on the wall.

For the final step in this do-it-yourself project, insert the boards into the frames. Cover the back of the picture with a plain piece of cardboard and seal all the edges with brown paper tape.

New Scrubber-Polisher Keeps Floors Like New

Elevate floor care to a new level of interest with a scrubber-polisher.

Miss Virginia Houtchens, Lane Extension Agent in home economics, says there's not much in the way of floor care this appliance can't do—and with the minimum of time and energy. It'll scrub, clean or loosen old wax; buff the floor between waxing; or remove scuffs and re-wax traffic areas.

But like any appliance, she warns, it must be operated strictly according to the manufacturer's instructions. Another important caution: Never use a floor polisher to apply self-polishing water base wax.

"A water base wax must be stroked on," Miss Houtchens stresses. "It dries too rapidly to be applied with a polisher."

And if rubbed while it dries the wax won't dry glossy."

Other cautions on using the machine:

- Turn off the machine unless it's moving. Running it on one spot will damage the floor finish.
- No need pressing down on the machine. It's already weighted to do the job.
- Use only a small amount of solution to avoid splattering, and work a small area of the floor at a time.
- Hang or stand machine upright to store. Never leave it standing on the brushes.

Further information on the use of the scrubber-polisher or on keeping floors "like new" is available by calling Lane Extension Service, DI 2-1311, Ext. 201, for a copy of the bulletin, "Floors and Their Care."

Second Step Select cards you wish to frame and carefully trim off all excess paper. Give the cards three coats of shellac, allowing at least an hour's drying time between coats. When dry, mount on fabric-covered boards, being careful to allow at least a quarter inch more space at the bottom of board than at top and sides.

Tradition Broken—Women Train at Air Force College

HENLOW, England (AP)—Two young women have brought a touch of charm into an hitherto exclusively male world of complex technology, at the Royal Air Force Technical College here.

They are two WRAF (Women's Royal Air Force) pilot officers, blonde Fiona Birnie, 20, from Cardiff and brunette Valerie Crowden, 19, from Burton-on-Trent.

They are the first women non-graduates to enter the college straight from school. All the thousands of students who have passed through the college in its more than 20 years of history have been men.

Neither Fiona nor Valerie has a regular boy friend. They are concentrating on their careers. After a year's training here they will become the first women Technical Signals Officers.

The girls have their own rooms, but take mess with the hundreds of men officers taking the course.

Says Fiona: "All the other students like us being here. It is a long break with tradition, but for technically minded girls, there is a good life in the WRAF."
