

But He'll Dine There Tonight

Pauling Joins White House Pickets

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Nobel prize-winning chemist who will be a dinner guest of President and Mrs. Kennedy tonight picketed the White House Saturday, but from a distance of a block away.

Linus C. Pauling of the California Institute of Technology joined the picket line of Women Strike for Peace, a group protesting the resumption of U.S. nuclear tests.

He was assigned a three-hour stint, from noon to 3 p.m. His wife also joined the picket line.

Pauling and his wife are among 175 guests, including 49 Nobel prize winners, invited to the White House dinner.

He said they plan to attend the dinner. Pauling won the 1954 Nobel Prize for chemistry.

The picketing had to be conducted on H St., across Lafayette Park from the White House, instead of on the sidewalk in front of the White House on Pennsylvania Ave.

Washington police barred picketing within 500 feet of the White House because of the presence there of British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. The 500-foot rule is invoked only when a distinguished foreign visitor is at the White House.

Costless and hatless, Pauling carried two different signs. One said "No" and included a picture of an atomic explosion. The other read: "Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Macmillan: You have no right to test."

Robert Oppenheimer, Wife Invited To Sunday Dinner at White House

WASHINGTON (AP)—Robert Oppenheimer, the controversial nuclear physicist, has been invited to dinner at the White House Sunday along with many other eminent scientists.

The names of Oppenheimer and his wife appeared on the list of 175 guests. The dinner honors all living Nobel Prize winners in the Western Hemisphere.

Oppenheimer, often called the father of the atomic bomb, was barred from access to atomic secrets by a 4-1 vote of the Atomic Energy Commission in June 1954.

The list of Nobel Prize winners includes 46 U.S. citizens; one Canadian, one Frenchman and one German. Both the Frenchman and German now live in this country.

In addition to the Nobel Prize winners, President and Mrs. Kennedy also invited other prominent men and women from the arts, education and science.

Included among the guests also are several university presidents whose institutions have Nobel faculty members. Oppenheimer was in this group.

Oppenheimer now is director of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N.J. where he is continuing his research in fundamental physics.

In 1954 Oppenheimer, who played a key role in developing the first atomic bomb, was a consultant to the AEC. The commission ruled he was a security risk, but did not question his loyalty.

In Vote of Revision Board Governor Sole Ballot Choice

SALEM (AP)—Oregon's Constitution Revision Commission voted 9-6 Saturday to have the governor as the only statewide elected official.

The action would give the governor complete authority over the executive branch of the state government.

It would eliminate the elective offices of secretary of state, treasurer, attorney general and labor commissioner. The governor would get authority to appoint them, and to reorganize the state government.

The action is in direct opposition to the vote of the 1961 legislature against giving the governor limited powers to reorganize the government.

The 17-member commission will submit its proposed new constitution to the 1963 legislature, which has the power to change it. Then it would go on the 1964 election ballot.

The commission voted 11-4 against a motion by ex-Gov. Charles A. Sprague to retain the elective offices of governor, secretary of state and treasurer.

State Sen. Walter J. Pearson, D-Portland, carried the argument for having the governor as the sole elected official.

"If we want a strong governor," he said, "we should give him the responsibility so people would know whom to blame."

Sprague argued that "Oregon prefers a loose-jointed organization of executive departments. I oppose a highly regimented pyramidal form of government."

"We would dry up the springs of political activity and political interest by having the governor as the only elected official."

"We would further impair political organization."

Pearson replied that the secretary of state and treasurer don't have much to do. While he agreed that Oregon has had good men in those offices, there "always is a chance that a crooked or ignorant treasurer might be elected."

Ex-Gov. Robert D. Holmes took issue with Sprague. He said stronger state government is needed to prevent the federal government from taking over more of the state governmental functions.

"With the governor as the only elected official," he said, "there would be no buck passing."

Circuit Judge Herbert M. Schwab of Portland argued for the governor as the only elected official. He said there are too many checks and balances in the present system.

First Graders Must Have Health Check

Children who will enter the first grade this fall, or students who are new to Oregon, will be required to have a physical examination.

This reminder was issued by W. E. Burke, director of health, physical education and athletics for the Eugene Public Schools.

Letters have been mailed by the PTA health chairman of the Eugene Public Schools to parents of children who will enter the first grade next fall. The letter explains the State Board of Education regulations, and contains a medical form.

Anyone who did not receive the letter may call the School Health Office, DI 2-1151, ext. 349. Completed medical forms may be mailed or brought to the school health office, 275 E. Seventh Ave., Eugene.

Parents who object to the examination for religious reasons may have their children excused by contacting the health office and filling out a special form, Burke said.

Court Arraigns Cottage Grove Man

Clifford L. Ross, 33, of Cottage Grove, was arraigned in Lane County District Court Friday on a charge of obtaining money and property under false pretenses.

Ross allegedly gave a worthless $10 check on March 27 to the Eagle Cigar Store in Cottage Grove.

Wagner Quits As Candidate

NEW YORK (AP)—Mayor Robert F. Wagner removed himself Saturday as a candidate for the governorship this fall against Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Reports had persisted that President Kennedy wanted Wagner, the state's strongest Democrat, to try to upset Rockefeller, a potential Republican nominee for President in 1964.

Wagner told a news conference he had discussed the matter with Kennedy but that he was "never under pressure" and that the President "knew how I felt."

The mayor, elected to a third four-year term last fall, said he could not "walk away" from his city duties.

He added, in effect, that there was no need for him to run for governor—that there are "a number of outstanding Democrats who running on a liberal forward-looking platform, can take the measure of Gov. Rockefeller."

Rockefeller, commenting on Wagner's announcement, said "The decision is up to him."

Plumbers End 13-Day Strike

SALEM (AP)—The 13-day-old plumbers strike in five Western Oregon cities ended Saturday with a new contract signed by Salem Local 347 of the Plumbers and Steamfitters Union, AFL-CIO, and the Willamette Assn. of Plumbing and Heating Contractors.

The announcement was made shortly after noon by C. J. Hansen of Salem, president of the contractors association, and George Reed of Molalla, business manager for the union local.

Between 80 and 90 plumbers will go back to work Monday morning in Albany, Corvallis, Salem, Lebanon and Newport. Pickets in the first four cities are being withdrawn.

The new contract calls for pay increases through 1964, extra pay for working on scaffolding over 40 feet, a raise in subsistence pay from $6 to $8 a day, a change in the arbitration clause which would put future disputes into the hands of a single arbitrator.

The announcement was made shortly after noon by C. J. Hansen of Salem, president of the contractors association, and George Reed of Molalla, business manager for the union local.

Steel Takes It On the Chin Second Time

News of Indictment Sends Stocks Lower

By JACK LEFLER
Of the Associated Press

NEW YORK—The steel industry took it on the chin again last week—this time through indictment of four steel companies, a trade association and five individuals on charges of conspiring to fix prices and rig bids.

The development came as the sound and fury of the two-week-old steel price increase warfare echoed. But there was no connection.

Indicted by a federal grand jury were United States Steel Corp., Bethlehem Steel Co., Erie Forge & Steel Corp., and Midvale-Heppenstall Co. also charged were Open Die Forging Institute and five officials of the four companies.

The bids cited in the indictment were on sales of steel forgings to the Army, Navy, electrical companies and other buyers.

The Forging Institute was alleged to have acted as a "clearing house" for price agreements among the accused companies.

The Justice Department said it began investigating the case in April 1961.

The case against the steel companies appeared to parallel the indictment for price fixing and bid rigging of 29 electrical equipment manufacturers and 44 of their executives in 1960.

The companies and executives were fined a total of $1,924,500 and seven executives were sent to jail.

The indictment returned Thursday had nothing to do with the steel industry's raising prices $8 a ton April 10, only to back down three days later under steamroller pressure from the Kennedy administration. However, steel pricing is under investigation by another federal grand jury.

News of the indictment sent steel stocks lower on the New York Stock Exchange. They had been declining all week on investor disappointment over first quarter earnings.

Charity Society Spokesman Sums Up Aims of Group

"No faith, no creed, no race, no form of human misery, is unknown to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul."

With these words George E. Heneghan, of St. Louis, Saturday summarized the purpose of St. Vincent de Paul: to give help where it is needed, to those who need it.

Heneghan, president of the Superior Council of the United States of the society, was in Eugene Friday and Saturday for the West Coast regional conference of St. Vincent de Paul.

While the Catholic organization's work takes many forms, Heneghan said, it revolves around the individual family. "Ours is a family program," he explained. "We believe the family is a unit of society, and anything we can do to preserve the family, preserves society in general."

Most of the society's workers volunteer their time. In large cities, an executive secretary and professional case workers are sometimes used.

Members of the clergy do not work directly with St. Vincent de Paul.

"We are greatly indebted to members of the clergy for their help," Heneghan said, "but this is a lay society."

How does the society help? Often through contributions to the needy and handicapped; by finding jobs for the unemployed; providing a homemaker to take care of the children when a mother is sick; psychiatric care, counseling.

"It's all for the purpose of preserving family life," Heneghan said.

H. C. McDonald, manager of the St. Vincent de Paul Salvage Bureau in Eugene, explained that the bureau was one of the ways the society had found to raise money. Last year the bureau in eight western states and Vancouver, B. C. collected $229,737, which was contributed to the handicapped and needy.

The most important source of funds, however, Heneghan said, is through contributions from individual members. These are made secretly, he said, and no one knows how much is given by an individual.

The Most Rev. Edward D. Howard, archbishop of Portland in Oregon, welcomed the members of the society to Eugene's regional conference with these words:

"I share your concern to see established in every parish a conference of St. Vincent de Paul. Those parishes which have sponsored the society have seen the magnificent results it achieves. With the help of devoted laymen the parish priest is better enabled to meet the diverse needs of his people. As your constitution so well points out, no work of charity is foreign to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul."

President Signs Peace Corps Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy Saturday signed a bill permitting a big expansion of the Peace Corps.

The measure authorizes him to spend $63,750,000 to put 9,970 volunteers into the Corps by the fall of 1963. It now has about 900 volunteers and expects that number to increase to 2,400 by June 30 and to 5,100 next fall.

The legislation simply authorizes the appropriation of funds, which will have to be provided in separate legislation.
