For 10 UO Girls

Miss Eugene Finals Billed Friday Night

Ten University of Oregon students—ranging from freshman to senior—will vie Friday night for the title of Miss Eugene.

The winner will get a trip to Seaside in July for the Miss Oregon Contest. The Miss Oregon winner will then go to Atlantic City in September for the Miss America Pageant.

In addition to the trip, the Miss Eugene winner will receive a $125 scholarship from Pepsi-Cola, a charm school course from the Gloria LaVonne Finishing School, a trip to the Seattle World's Fair, and a wardrobe and other merchandise donated by Eugene merchants.

10 From Field of 18

The entrants are Maureen Noll, Peggy Darr, Nicola Roach, and Terri Hamlin, all of Eugene; Nanette Noble of Beaverton, Donna Larson of Seaside, Sandra Lafky of Sherwood, Mary Sue Woolfolk of Portland, Joanne Hinkley of The Dalles, and Rosalie Wassner of Portland.

The ten finalists were chosen from a field of 18 at a preliminary last week. The winner will succeed Carla Jean Garrison of Lebanon, another U of O student, who won the 1961 contest.

Each contestant will do a three-minute talent number (50 per cent) and make appearances in a bathing suit (25 per cent) and evening gown (25 per cent).

Judging will be based on beauty, figure, posture, poise, grace and general appearance in addition to the talent number.

Other Performances

In addition to the contestants' appearances, Friday night's program will also include performances by Jerry Reynolds of Eugene, winner of the regional San Francisco Opera auditions; the Eugene All-Star Jazz Band, and the South Eugene High School Purple Pipers singing group.

Tickets are priced at $1 for reserved section, 75 cents general admission, and 50 cents for high school students and younger. The Eugene Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the contest again this year.

By Newly Elected State President

Extended Role Sketched for YDs

Oregon's Young Democratic clubs make up a vital part of the state's political organization, and they can do even more to serve the party and the state.

This opinion was expressed Saturday by Merlyn M. Gubser, newly elected president of the Oregon State Young Democrats. Gubser, 22, is studying for a master's degree at the University of Oregon.

"We have a club in every college in the state, except Linfield, and we're working on that," Gubser said.

A large number of college students and professional men and women are active in the Young Democrats, Gubser said—people who are deeply interested in government, and who are willing to contribute their talents in working for a better state.

While the organization is well-known, Gubser wants to do more work to inform the public of the ideas and goals of the Young Democrats.

"We want to publish our platform," he said. "There are a lot of misconceptions people have. We don't want people to misunderstand."

Discussing some of the principal platform points, Gubser said "In foreign policy, we generally follow the policy of the Kennedy administration."

On the question of Communist China, Gubser said, "We believe any nation that will meet the requirements of the United Nations should be admitted."

The platform calls for the abolishment of seniority in Congress. Under the Young Democrats proposal, appointments to committees would be made by a caucus of the party. Another goal, Gubser said, is "establishment of national minimum standards in education, including teacher training and basic curriculum. We also believe teacher salaries should be raised."

The platform calls for protection of labor, Gubser said, "but not at the expense of management. . . . However, there are more safeguards for labor than for management in our proposals."

In general, Gubser said, he would like to see more participation in politics and government. There is too much apathy in America today, he said.

A number of Young Democrats are seeking political office this year, Gubser said, and they have received the endorsement of the organization in the primaries. The endorsement was not made just because they are members of the Young Democratic organization, Gubser said, but because the majority at the convention felt they were qualified.

"We have stayed away from primary endorsement completely until this year," he said.

As president, Gubser will find it easy to work with another important officer of the Oregon State Young Democrats. His wife, Sandy, is secretary-treasurer.

Gubser does not plan to run for office himself, he said, "at least not in the immediate future." When he finishes graduate work, he will teach social science, probably at the high school or junior college level.

City Council Agenda Lists Two Issues

Two controversy-filled items will be on the agenda of the Eugene City Council when it meets Monday, 6:30 p.m. standard, 7:30 p.m. daylight, at the city hall.

One is a proposal for tighter controls on dogs in the city. The other is a city staff recommendation that the use of impregnated fiber pipe be banned for sewer connections when a new plumbing code is adopted.

Dog Fanciers

Representatives of several dog fancier groups have indicated they will be present Monday night to oppose some of the proposed changes in the present ordinance. The council, at a committee-of-the-whole meeting, instructed Atty. Herman Hendershott to redraft one proposal for further consideration.

The council members decided to change the ordinance after hearing a protest from a Willamette housewife that a dog still runs at large after biting several children and adults.

The council also discussed the merits of impregnated fiber pipe at a recent committee-of-the-whole meeting, but decided to send the matter to Monday night's meeting without a committee recommendation.

Fibre Pipe an Issue

A delegation of suppliers and sales representatives are trying to persuade the council not to eliminate the fiber pipe from permitted materials for sewer house connections.

Public Works Director Don Allen, City Manager Hugh McKinley engineering consultant and Ralph Roderick all recommend that impregnated fiber pipe be excluded. They say it frequently fails to hold up, thus permitting infiltration of water into sanitary sewer lines.

Firm to Open Branch Office

A new Equitable Savings & Loan Assn. office will be opened in Springfield May 17, the firm has announced.

Company officials said that state authority to open the office was obtained last month. The new office, to be located in leased quarters at 641 Main St., will be managed by Daniel G. Millar. He has been in Equitable's Eugene office as a loan interviewer and teller since last December.

The new office will be the firm's 15th in the state, according to Harold H. Calk, executive vice president of the company in Portland. Initially it will be staffed only by Millar and one other person, a receptionist and teller. It will serve savings accounts, principally, but also will take loan applications.

An open house is planned for May 17-19, according to Ralph Hanson, Equitable's Eugene manager, who has been coordinating plans for the opening of the new Springfield branch.

The event is sponsored by the Parents Assn. of the Rollerdom, to help send the Ridgeway Skaters club to the American skating championships in Lincoln, Neb.

DELEGATE—Kim Short, North Eugene High School junior, will represent the 342 clubs of the Northwest Hi Y and Tri Hi Y, as a delegate to the National Hi Y Council at Lake Forest College, Ill., June 29-July 1. Short is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Short, 574 Roland Way.

Springfield Paving Plans Council Topic

Springfield city councilmen will conduct public hearings Monday evening on four proposed paving projects.

The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m. standard, 8:30 daylight, at the Springfield City Hall.

Streets proposed for paving are M from Eighth to Ninth, N from Eighth to Ninth, West N from one-half block west of Mill to Laura.

The council will also conduct a public hearing on the proposed annexation of a tract at the northeast corner of Fifth and Q streets.

Hearings will also be held on two zoning matters: (1) Request for a variance at the northwest corner of N and Tenth streets, and (2) request for rezoning a tract at 4800 Main St. from suburban residential (RA) to commercial (C-3).

Meanwhile, the council has tentatively scheduled a joint meeting with the Springfield Utility Board for next Friday. A time and place is yet to be determined.

On Waldo Lake Plans

Forest Service Seeking Advice

Public advice will be sought by the U.S. Forest Service on development plans of the Waldo Lake area, David Gibeay, supervisor of the Willamette National Forest, announced Saturday.

An advisory group of lay people will be created to give consideration to specifics in the plans, he said.

The announcement followed by a short time a criticism of the Waldo Lake plan by Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore.

Morse said that the announced plan for the lake and basin was too general and said that a Waldo Lake Advisory Board should be established so that recreational development would be given proper priority.

The Gibeay announcement made no mention of the Morse recommendation.

The Forest Service intends to proceed soon with a survey of a main road to the area and to send recreation planners to the area to gather detailed data for specific recreation development, Gibeay said.

"It is our sincere intention to make this highly important recreation area an outstanding example of good lands management," Gibeay said. "The area has great public appeal and a wide variety of opportunities to meet the growing needs of people in Oregon for outdoor recreation."

There will be no physical development in the area until such plans are approved, Gibeay added. These plans, when drawn up, will be available for review by anyone.

Members of the advisory group have not yet been chosen. The seven-mile-long lake north of Highway 58 in the Cascades has been the subject of a continuing controversy for several years. The newest Forest Service plan stresses that the lake and its immediate area will be developed for recreation.

State Sends 'Blow Torch' To Alaska

A unique "burning machine," accompanied by Leland Curry of 1293 Darlene Ave., Eugene, was enroute to Alaska by air Saturday to solve a problem of the Fairbanks International Airport.

The airport's main runway is too slick so the burning machine invented by the Oregon Highway Department—a semi truck with a propane fired burner mounted on its back—is to be used to alleviate the problem.

Purpose of the apparatus is to restore nonskid quality on asphalt highways and other surfaces. The Highway Department said it was advised by Alaska officials that the situation is critical, with planes starting to skid on the runways.

Curry, a top burner foreman, went along with the 10-ton machine which was dismantled in Salem Friday and loaded on two airplanes. He will supervise the reassembly at Fairbanks and stay for a week to train operators for the huge blowtorch.

The burner was developed in 1958 and the Highway Department now has a fleet of four.

The movie, sponsored by the university's German club, deals with the resistance within the German army during World War II. The public is invited.

The 'University Family' UO Mothers Hear Flemming

Six hundred persons, including a generous sprinkling of sons and daughters, attended the Saturday breakfast and annual meeting of Oregon Mothers in Erb Memorial Union. Twice that number of mothers, it is estimated, were on campus.

Mrs. P. W. Kaseberg of Wasco, president, was at the microphone. Among the special guests was Mrs. Meredith Wilson, wife of the former UO president, here from Minneapolis for the weekend with her student daughters.

President Arthur S. Flemming, main speaker of the event, said that after ten months on campus he is convinced there is what he characterized as a "university family," consisting of faculty, civil service employees, students and parents. This combined "family" works together "with dedication to provide opportunity for maximum growth and development."

"The 'university family' believes in setting high standards of conduct, and living in a manner consistent with these standards, recognizing that maximum development can be realized only by traveling the high road of life," he said.

He paid compliment to his immediate predecessor, O. Meredith Wilson, who had set such standards and through them had strengthened the university and had attracted superior teachers. He also congratulated Chancellor Roy E. Lieualien upon the spirit of teamwork he is developing among executive educators in the state.

He thanked UO Mothers for the gift of $7,600 toward scholarships in the coming year, the check having been presented prior to his talk. He especially commended the group for its "extra" gift of $300 to Dean Golda (Mrs. J. Alan) Wickham, to be used at her discretion to aid "homesick-but-broke" girls to visit their homes, or for similar cases.

Mrs. Leonard Zincker, scholarship chairman for the Mothers, told highlights of her job, listing the problems which send students in quest of scholarships. Some are refugees new in this country; others have met sudden need through disaster to the head of family, from mental illness to sudden death. Most pitiful she found the case of the "late-bloomer," the boy or girl who has idled through high school for a year or two, then awakened to the meaning of scholarship, but too late to pull up his grades.

Dan Williams of Astoria, president of Associated Students in the past year, expressed his belief that the student body has grown in its degree of acceptance of responsibility. He praised the university for creating a dynamic environment. "We must here prepare not only to make a living, but learn how to live and how to lead," he said. He also expressed concern for the state of the world, saying: "We must learn to do more than straighten pictures on the wall of a house that is burning."

Other speakers were Chancellor Lieualien, who elaborated on the problem of meeting expanded enrollments; Kenneth Ghent, scholarship chairman for the university, who praised the Mothers for their hard work for scholarship funds; and Karl Onthank, professor emeritus, who told of the difficult years in the '30s when Oregon Mothers organized to aid needy students. He praised their foresight in establishment of the Student Emergency Loan Fund, now grown to $30,000, from which this year, for the first time, they used surplus funds in awarding 22 scholarships to 12 girls and six boys. The loan fund, he added, has aided as many as 1,300 students in a single year, through short loans.

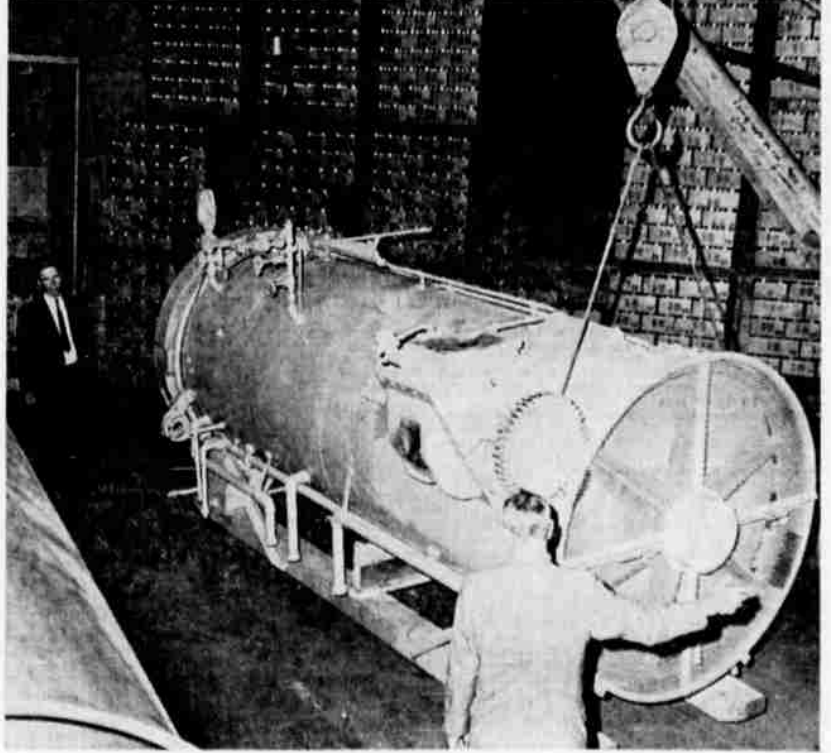

Officers elected at the meeting are as follows: President, Mrs. Herman Jochemson of Salem; vice president, Mrs. Thomas Taylor of Portland; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles Wood, Salem; corresponding secretary, Mrs. N. E. Ottesen, Eugene;

Ply Plant To Be Built

COOS BAY (AP)—Weyerhaeuser Co. has disclosed plans for a new plywood plant for its Coos Bay area operations.

Howard Hunt, branch manager for the firm here, said Saturday contracts for the plant would be let within 30 days. He said details regarding size, number of personnel and completion date would be announced in about a month.

Hunt said the plant is being designed to permit the company to realize the full potential of its Millicoma tree farm. It will be located on a 47-acre site just south of Weyerhaeuser's present sawmill and particle board plant near North Bend. It will be the firm's sixth plywood plant in the West.

New Unit

The food-processing capacity of the Eugene Fruit Growers Assn. plant is being increased by 15 per cent with the installation of three new pressure cooker and cooler units. One of these units was delivered last week at the Eugene plant. Willis R. Finley, general superintendent, stands by as a representative of the manufacturer in the foreground directs the unloading. The pressure cooker-cooler can process half of a carload of gallon-sized cans an hour. The three component units were purchased from the Food Machinery Co. of San Jose, Calif. for $83,000.
