

$174,576 Requested For Study

Plan Drawn Up For Lane Juvenile Delinquency Survey

By SAM FREAR
Of the Register-Guard

An application to the federal government for $174,576 to finance a study of juvenile delinquency in Lane County was filed last week.

The research proposal was drawn up by Kenneth Polk, assistant professor of sociology at the University of Oregon and sponsored by the recently formed Lane County Youth Study Board.

This organization is composed of community leaders originally called together a year ago by Circuit Court Judge William S. Fort to discuss means of a community attack upon juvenile delinquency.

Now that there is a possibility—described as "encouraging"—of federal funds to help Eugene study the community approach to the problem, Fort's group decided to organize formally and is now taking the initial steps toward incorporation.

Nicholson Elected President

The Rev. Wesley Nicholson was elected the first president of the Youth Study Board, and heads a 15-man executive committee.

If Polk's proposed research plan is approved, it would begin for an 18-month period on June 1.

Polk's proposal emphasized the rural-small city aspect of Lane County, and the fact that the University of Oregon provides staff to do research work, and the interest shown by the members of the Youth Study Board.

The requested grant would come from $30 million made available by Congress under the Delinquency and Youth Offenses Control Act.

12 U.S. Communities

About 12 communities across the United States will be selected for research grants, and of these, about five may be chosen to demonstrate a project, based on the research, to control juvenile delinquency.

This demonstration grant could total up to $3 million.

The President's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime has scheduled a meeting in Washington during the first week of June, and will make recommendations regarding research grants.

Allied Union Topic of Talk

Clarence K. Streit, president of the International Movement for a Proletarian Union, will speak on "Prudent Limits to an American Commitment on European Political Union," at the University of Oregon Tuesday.

The talk will be given at a university assembly at 12 standard, 1 p.m. daylight, in the ballroom of the Erb Memorial Union. The public is welcome.

Streit has been president of the IMAU since 1958 and president of Federal Union, Inc., since 1939. He has been editor of Freedom and Union since 1946.

A long-time supporter of the Atlantic community, Streit is author of "Union Now," which pioneered the federal union of Atlantic democracies. This was a detailed case for a federation of the democracies. The author has recently written "Freedom's Frontier—Atlantic Union Now," which up-dates and revises according to events since 1948, his ideas expressed in "Union Now."

Streit is also author of "Union Now with Britain," "Freedom Against Itself," and is co-author of "The New Federalist."

Register-Guard Correspondent

FLORENCE—A record number of people attended events during the three-day Rhododendron Festival which ended here late Sunday.

More than 25,000 spectators attended the Sunday afternoon parade and viewed the largest procession in the festival's 55-year history.

A beaming and radiant brunette, Janice Grand, regined as Queen Rhododendra. She was crowned queen during the Coronation Ball Saturday night.

Other members of her court were Curren Emery, Libby Johnson, Sheryl Cameron and Judy Shierr.

"Those Wonderful Years" was the festival theme this year and a double-decked replica of a showboat carrying passengers wearing costumes of the Mississippi riverboat period for the parade sweepstakes for Florence Auto Parts.

Kitty Hawk to Cape Canaveral was depicted by six aircraft models and won the first prize among organizational entries in the parade. It was sponsored by Florence Cub Scout Pack 377. Safeway Stores won the top commercial float prize.

Among parade entries were the Eugene Highlander bagpipe band, the Grants Pass Cavemen, the Astoria Clowns, Cottage Grove Prospectors, Coos Bay Pirates, antique autos, Lane County Sheriff's Posse, Dune Patrol, Dune Dusters, royalty from other cities and 15 bands.

Sunday afternoon visitors were treated to a clam chowder feed, a water ski program, arts and craft show, antique auto exhibit and "Gay 90's" Melodrama staged by the Florence Civic Theater.

More than 200 square dancers from throughout the state attended the Saturday night jamboree.

Queen contestant Miss Johnson won the Friday night talent show contest with a skit on marriage.

The festival was launched Friday afternoon. More than 800 grade school children participated in the weekend events. A packed house heard the fifth and sixth grade chorus and ensemble; second and third graders perform a "Raggle, Taggle Town" dance, second and fifth graders stage folk dances and watched the winding of the Maypole.

New Citizen Wins G-P Scholarship

Astrida Berzs, Springfield High School senior who came to the United States from her native Latvia 11 years ago, is winner of a Georgia-Pacific Foundation scholarship worth up to $4,000.

ASTRIDA BERZS
Scholarship Winner

Miss Berzs became a citizen of the United States last Thursday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Berzs of 403 N. 16th St., Springfield.

Marion Talmadge, director of the foundation, announced the award Monday. The award had been delayed until this week at the request of Charles Smith, principal of Springfield High School, to give Miss Berzs the opportunity to complete requirements for U.S. citizenship. Citizenship is a prerequisite for the award. Smith and a faculty committee chose the winner on the basis of need, scholarship, intellectual ability, character and promise of future contribution to society.

Miss Berzs has a 3.8 grade average (4.0 is perfect) at Springfield High. She has served on the school's social and school spirit committees, and she has held several offices in student government. She was a princess for the Homecoming Court, a Winter Party princess and Rally queen.

Miss Berzs plans to prepare for a career in elementary education at the University of Oregon.

The Georgia-Pacific scholarship pays $750 a year for four years, a total of $3,000 if the recipient attends a tax-supported school in Oregon. If the winner chooses a private school, the award is $4,000.

Slot Machines Seized By Sheriff's Deputies

Six slot machines were in the hands of the Lane County sheriff Monday after being plucked from thick weeds off Day Island in the middle of the night.

The machines were seized by several sheriff's deputies led by chief criminal deputy Ken Allen about 1:10 a.m. daylight Monday.

They had been cached in the bushes off Day Island Road just east of the Ferry Street bridge. The discovery was the result of continuing work by the sheriff's office to locate slot machines in Lane County. Oregon law makes it unlawful to possess slot machines.

Allen explained that the investigation to uncover slot machine operations in the county involves a variety of methods, much of the work done through third parties and over the telephone.

The seizure early Monday morning came after a transfer of the machines had been arranged by the sheriff's office through undercover methods. A telephone call came through unexpectedly late at night indicating where the machines had been placed and could be picked up.

The deputies went to the place indicated and found the machines. A stake-out was put on the area but no one appeared. When it became apparent that no one was coming the machines were tagged as evidence and taken into custody. No arrests were made in connection with the seizure.

The machines were of a conventional type operated manually. They work with a variety of denominations of coins. The machines were all locked and the sheriff's office planned to unlock them Monday to determine how much money they contained.

UO Official Takes Peace Corps Post

Richard McDaniel, director of off-campus housing at the University of Oregon, has resigned to take a staff position with the U.S. Peace Corps in Puerto Rico.

He will be succeeded by John D. Thorpe, who has announced his resignation from the staff of the Lane County Building and Sanitation Department.

McDaniel, a University of Oregon graduate, had been in the university's housing office about two years. His job in Puerto Rico will involve training Peace Corps volunteers, McDaniel said.

Thorpe has been with the Lane County sanitation department nine years. He is a sanitarian who has been responsible for coordination of air and stream pollution programs. He is next in seniority on the staff to county Sanitarian John Stoner.

Thorpe's resignation is effective May 31. His departure will leave the department short three sanitarians.

The full complement calls for eight sanitarians in addition to Stoner, a building inspector and a plumbing inspector.

The director of off-campus housing at the university works with students seeking apartments and rooms, and with Eugene's landlords. His office serves as a general clearing house.
