

Council Sets Friday Meet In Springfield

Springfield councilmen will meet in informal session Friday evening to discuss possible revisions in the city's noise ordinance and boundaries for the proposed annexation of Willamette Heights.

The council will also receive a report from the street committee on a proposed sidewalk project on M Street between Eighth and Ninth.

The Springfield Planning Commission has already recommended a change in the city's noise ordinance. The proposed change would permit the operation of air compressors or other such devices during night hours in industrially zoned areas. At present, it is unlawful to operate air compressors any place in Springfield at night.

Although a number of persons have signed petitions requesting the annexation of the Willamette Heights area, no definite boundaries have been established. The council hopes to set boundaries shortly so an election can be scheduled.

Friday night's meeting will start at 7:30 standard, 8:30 daylight, at the Springfield Library.

EEA PRESIDENT—Donald Johnson, industrial arts teacher at Thomas Jefferson Junior High School has been named president of the Eugene Education Assn. for 1962-63 succeeding Kenneth Kienzle. Stella Maglady elementary school principal Walter Burgess is the new vice president.

House Demos Hope to Pass Farm Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—House Democratic leaders hoped to push through the administration's controversial farm bill late Thursday by the margin of a few votes.

Two days of acrimonious debate ended Wednesday and the long process of amendment began, with 15 voted on before the House quit for the day.

Sometime Thursday a test vote was likely to come on a key Republican amendment to substitute for the entire bill a mere extension of the present voluntary wheat and feed grain programs.

Democratic Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma said Wednesday night he believed he had enough votes to win.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman stationed himself across the hall in Speaker John W. McCormack's office Wednesday, to help persuade wavering Democrats. There appeared to be no hope of persuading any Republicans to vote for it, although Freeman tried by sending a letter to about 30 GOP members.

Democratic members of the agriculture committee Wednesday started offering a long list of "acceptable" amendments designed to make the bill conform to the already passed Senate version.

Currin Rites Held at CG

COTTAGE GROVE—Funeral services for Elsie Mae Currin, 76, of 290 W. Broadway, Eugene, who died June 19, were held this Thursday in Cottage Grove.

Goodwill Planning Expansion Here

"Not charity—but a chance," is the program offered handicapped persons by the Lane County Branch of Goodwill Industries of Oregon, Eugene Kiwanians were told Wednesday noon.

The Rev. Carlton C. Buck, pastor of the First Christian Church of Eugene, a member of the Goodwill Advisory Board, outlined goals for an expanded Goodwill Industries operation in Eugene.

He said sponsors hope to construct a $150,000 plant in Eugene which will provide equipment for 100 work stations. Here, handicapped people can earn money and learn new skills by repairing all sorts of donated items. The repaired items are sold to provide income for the workers. Kiwanians viewed a motion picture which explained the Goodwill Industries program, founded in Boston, Mass., some 60 years ago.

"In our society," said Buck, "people have value and dignity."

They are not a cog in a human machine. Through Goodwill, a rehabilitated person can be made productive in his community."

Goodwill operates a store on 11th Avenue, just east of Willamette Street, where repaired items are sold. The Eugene branch has purchased property on Elmira Road, Buck said, for its proposed new workshop. If employment can be provided for 100 handicapped workers—who are on waiting lists—he said estimated savings in welfare costs would be $75,000 a year.

The cavities these young people didn't have should change your mind about toothpaste

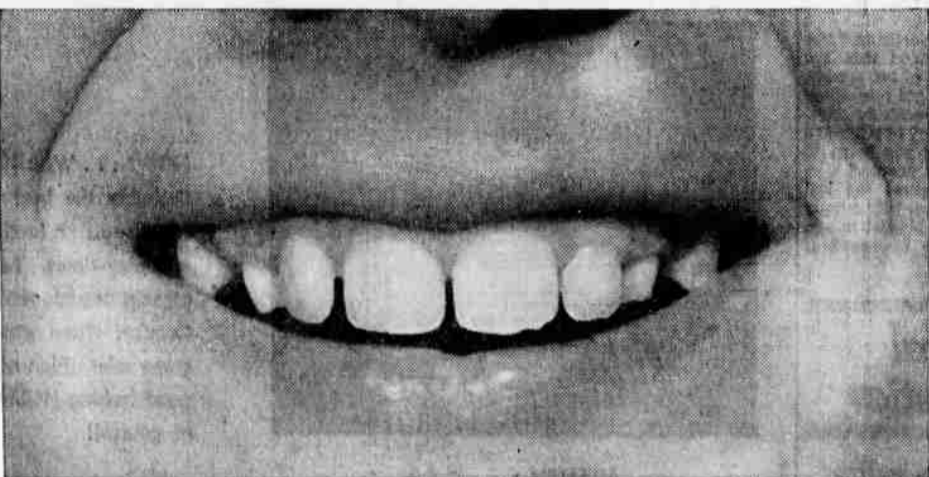

Toothpaste test #1: 405 Minnesota school children. Half the children used Crest, half a control toothpaste. Brushing was supervised once a day. Both groups received semiannual dental checkups for the two years of the test.

Result: 21% fewer cavities for the Crest group

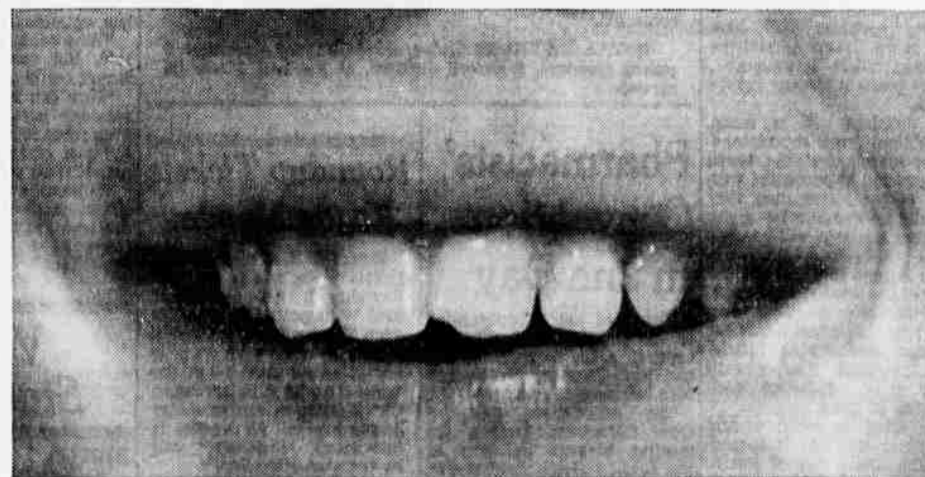

Toothpaste test #2: 247 young adults at a university. Again, half used Crest, half a control toothpaste. As in all these tests, neither side knew which toothpaste they had. And both sides brushed as usual for two years.

Result: 34% fewer cavities for the Crest group

Toothpaste test #3: 190 military-school students. Another two-group test, lasting two years. Both groups brushed three times every day, under supervision.

Result: 46% fewer cavities for the Crest group

Toothpaste test #4: 343 Indiana school children. Both groups brushed as usual for three years. Coincidentally, the result was the same as in the Minnesota test, above left.

Result: 21% fewer cavities for the Crest group

Results like these make Crest the only toothpaste recognized effective against cavities

When you read the results above, do you think of your own family? You should. Because the people who had fewer cavities were enough like you to be your neighbors.

They simply used Crest, while another group used a control toothpaste exactly like Crest but without Crest's exclusive Fluoristan.*

In each of these tests the Crest group had fewer cavities.

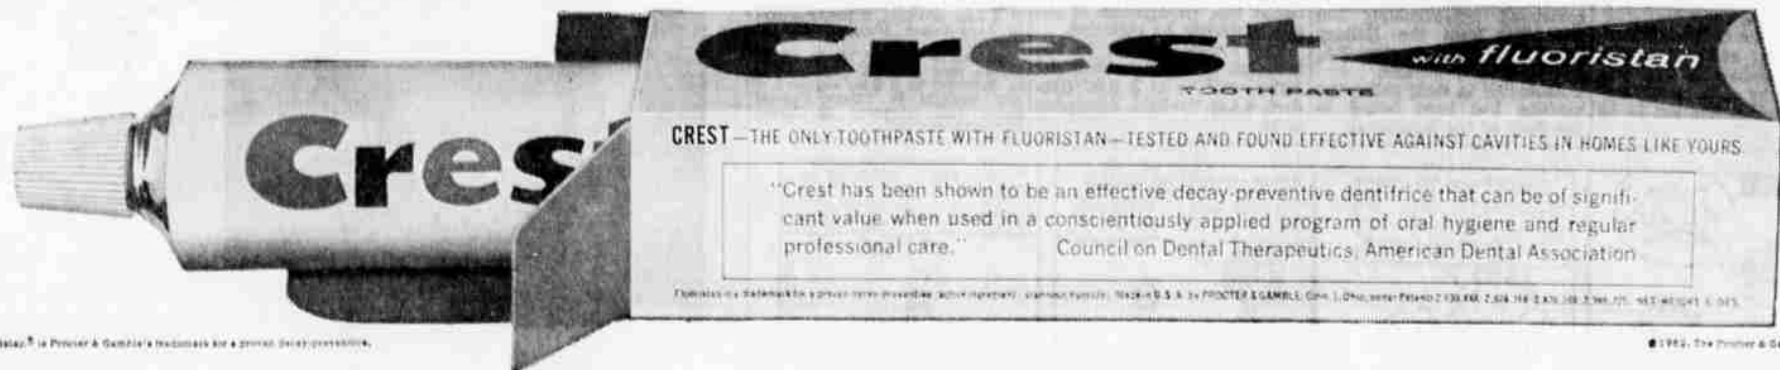

Fluoristan made the difference for them, as it can for you. Because Crest with Fluoristan gives your family a patented decay-preventive formula found in no other toothpaste.

That's why Crest is the only toothpaste with proof of effectiveness from 9 years of tests.

Of course, your family should use Crest the right way... as part of a complete dental program. (That's pointed out in the official statement on the carton below.) The rules are simple:

- Brush regularly—after each meal is best.
- Brush right—away from the gums, and thoroughly.
- Watch those between-meal treats—proper diet is important.
- See your dentist twice a year—he can spot trouble and stop it before it makes real headway.
- Add the protection of Crest to your dental program today.
