

Log Salvage Plan Outlined

OAKRIDGE — Timber sales programs of the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management (BLM) have been geared toward speedy cleanup and salvaging of timber which was blown down by the Columbus Day storm, according to officials of those agencies.

The changes in timber sales programs and problems of salvaging the timber were outlined by Forest Service and BLM representatives at a Lane County Chamber of Commerce meeting here Tuesday.

S. T. Moore, supervisor of the Siuslaw National Forest, said logging and cleanup of the timber began the Monday following the storm.

An estimated 465 million board feet was blown down "and because of the fire danger and bug threat we would like to get most of it on the market by July of next year," Moore said.

The salvage is going to pose a logging problem Moore said because of the danger to workers from snags and huge root wads which snap when the logs are bucked. Also, some standing timber in some areas will have to come out when salvage operations take place. Some new roads will have to be constructed too, Moore noted.

The Siuslaw's timber sales program had to be junked when the storm hit and now the emphasis is on salvage and clean-up work. The Forest Service hopes to have most of the salvage timber on the market by the spring of 1964, Moore explained.

Wilson Bjorge of the BLM's Eugene office said his agency's entire program is "slanted toward the salvage of blowdown and the intermingled green timber."

A new timber sales program is being planned and will be presented to the public sometime in December, Bjorge said. "We don't believe the forest industry will be seriously affected by changes in our program," he continued.

Many of the timber-sale buyers have problems "and we can't do too much unless we change regulations and, in some cases, have new legislation," Bjorge added.

In addition, some sales contracts which were let last summer have not been completed and some operators are asking for extensions so they can bid on salvage sales, Bjorge explained.

Rex Resler, deputy supervisor of the Willamette National Forest, said there would be no drastic change in major timber sales but there would be some changes in smaller sales.

Of the 70 million board feet of Willamette Forest timber blown down "We think we can salvage almost all with the exception of about 1 million board feet which is in scattered areas of the forest," Resler said.

Storm Left More Chance Of Outages

Eugene can look forward to more major power outages this winter as aftereffects of the Columbus Day storm, members of the Mayor's Advisory Council were told Wednesday.

Byron Price, superintendent of the Eugene Water & Electric Board, said the storm loosened many trees and power poles that may fall later.

"We are alerted to the problem and are working on it," he said. "But it's going to be a rough winter as far as we're concerned."

Springfield Mayor B. J. Rogers presided at the meeting, where representatives of the various public agencies in the Eugene-Springfield area get together once a month to discuss mutual problems.

The council decided to invite Lane County's legislative delegation to a dinner meeting next month. Also to be invited will be members of the Eugene and Springfield city councils. The purpose: To brief the legislators on Eugene-Springfield area problems.

Dystrophy Fund Drive Short of Goal

Lane County's Muscular Dystrophy fund Tuesday night reached $1,956—still far short of the drive's $10,000 goal.

At a meeting of drive chairmen and sub-chairmen, reports were given on the Sunday door-to-door fund drive in Eugene and Springfield. Chairmen said about 30 "marchers" had yet to turn in their collection envelopes.

Larry Anderson, drive co-chairman, said the door-to-door campaign to date—has raised about $1,500. He said a second drive will be held this Sunday in three areas not completely covered the previous week. These are Bethel-Danebo, Wilakentzie and some parts of south Eugene.

Only 200 of the expected 300 marchers turned out Sunday, Anderson said. He blamed this for the low collection total.

Two "coffee hours" at Eugene and Springfield restaurants brought in $85.85 (Eugene) and $26.80 (Springfield). The coffee hours were organized and sponsored by Epsilon Sigma Alpha, a service organization.

Other events and their net profits, Anderson said, were a benefit baseball game, $148 and "Do-nuts for Dystrophy" sales in Springfield, $296.

Still to be picked up are some 1,200 coin collection canisters. Anderson said a mail fund drive would begin, probably this week, in the county.

Funds from the drive are used in Lane County to aid the county's 15 known patients of the as-yet incurable disease and for research.

Clinic Owner Announces Retirement

Dr. Milton V. Walker of Pleasant Hill, who established the Walker Clinic in Eugene 22 years ago, has announced his retirement from the practice of medicine.

Walker, 59, has continued as owner of the clinic since it was opened in 1940 at 399 E. Tenth Ave. He started his Lane County practice in 1931 in Springfield, later moving his office to Eugene.

Walker and his wife, Helen, are vacationing in Palm Springs, Calif., and are not expected to return to Pleasant Hill before next spring.

Walker received his medical degree in 1928 from the University of Western Ontario at London, Canada. He entered practice at Powers, Ore., in 1930, after internship at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit and a residency in surgery at Multnomah Hospital in Portland. In recent years, he has specialized in surgery and has devoted much of his time to the study of cancer.

Walker took post-graduate work in surgery ten years ago at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York and later studied pathology and anatomy in Vienna.

Four doctors are continuing to practice at the clinic. They are Charles F. Williams, internal medicine; Philip C. Hemming, obstetrics and gynecology; M. Boyd Berryhill, pediatrics; and John U. Bascom, surgery.

Survivors include his wife Lee, a daughter, Bonnie Kline of California; a son Gary of Roseburg; his mother, Grace Carstensen of Lincoln, Neb.; three brothers, five sisters, and one grandchild.
