What They're Saying—

U.N., U.S. Criticized For Role in Katanga

By United Press International

Many European newspapers lashed out at the United Nations action against Katanga last week and some condemned the United States for its role in the Congo.

The Daily Telegraph said in London, "The British people may reflect whether a peace organization which, when impatient, acts no better than a second-rate dictator, has any world value."

It urged the United Nations to "forget about 'face' and move with extreme caution." "Otherwise there will be no copper revenues at all," the Telegraph warned.

The Guardian was one of the few papers to raise its voice in support of the U.N. operation. It said "contradictions" by Katanga President Moise Tshombe "have been staple fare . . . for two and a half years."

The Guardian said incidents like the killing of two Belgian women fleeing Jadotville tarnished the U.N. action "but these incidents ought not to be seized upon as an excuse to condemn the campaign or the United Nations officials in charge of it."

"The campaign has been justified, and further action will also be justified unless Katanga President Moise Tshombe keeps the promises he has made," the Guardian said.

The weekly Europe Magazine said in Brussels that except for the United States "Tshombe would have been supported and allowed to extend his influence . . . all the way down to the lower Congo."

The magazine called Katanga the "most advanced and solid fortress" of anti-communism in the southern part of Africa.

"Behind the appearances of Boy Scouts and candid apostles of anti-communism, the (U.S.) State Department is favoring gangs of sharp businessmen who have plunged on to the Congo," the magazine said.

It called President Kennedy "the butcher of Katanga" and a "Boy Scout." It said the gigantic Belgian Union Miniere Company, which runs Katanga copper mines supplied the United States with uranium during World War II.

The German newspaper Deutsche Tagespost of Wurzburg said, "One has done the Communists a great service with the bandit raid on Katanga, the only true non-communist Congolese province."

The newspaper said the U.N. operation was designed to "give Wall Street that which rightly belongs to European owners, undermine European influence in Africa (and) place the British under the dictatorship of American capital as in Near East."

In Vienna, the newspaper Kurier said the United States found "financial and political problems in the Congo closely interwoven."

The Portuguese newspaper A Voz said in Lisbon the United States had "good reasons for the shameful politics they are making in Africa."

It said the Negro vote in America may be the ulterior motive behind U.S. support of the U.N. Congo operation. "The U.S. will soon find out it hasn't won the Katanga game either," A Voz said.

"Soviet Russia is silent, having nothing to gain . . . but when the chaos becomes generalized that would be the time for her to come into it."

Novidades, another Portuguese newspaper, accused the United States of practicing "sinister imperialism" in Katanga. It said the United States was the main force behind the U.N. action in an effort to secure "fabulous economic wealth."

The European press also rapped U.S. embassy officials in Moscow for not aiding the Russian peasants who sought asylum from religious persecution.

"Why were these unfortunate persons abandoned to the not-too-exquisite hands of the Soviet police?" the Spanish newspaper ABC asked in Madrid.

The newspaper Arbeiter-Zeitung said in Vienna that Americans believed Soviet promises that no harm would come to the peasants, although Americans usually mistrust Russian pledges. "Would their (the peasants') lot have been the same had they been personages of great political importance?" the newspaper asked.

Around the world in Asia, most newspapers concentrated on other matters.

The famous "no war" clause written into the Japanese constitution by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff after World War II is becoming a sore point, the Asahi Shimbun said in Tokyo.

Otherwise, it added, the American constitution has worked extremely well.

"An expert eye can detect many flaws," Asahi said editorially. "Yet as a whole, the Japanese constitution, founded on peace and democracy, has adequately fulfilled its role as the basic law of the country."

"Changes in the international situation subsequently made it necessary for Japan to establish the three air, sea and land forces called the Defence Agency," the newspaper said.

"To bridge the gap between the actual circumstances and Article No. 9, the 'No War' clause, various legal justifications have been devised, but no definite ruling has yet been made," it commented.

Asahi said debate on the defence question is three-sided: Some Japanese favor a strict interpretation of the no-war clause; some feel that Japan can concentrate on purely defensive rearmament without violating it; and a third faction wants the clause abolished completely.

"Actually," the editorial concluded, "With a contemptuous look at all these arguments, Japan's defence set-up is being built up day-by-day."

Rites Monday

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon for Thomas H. Bowman, (left), 22, of Finn Rock and Eddie Franklin Hinkle, 23, of 859 W. M St., Springfield. Both men had been loggers working in the Big Fall Creek area Thursday when a landslide trapped and killed them along with Jerry Pitts, 23, of Springfield and William Thompson, 24, of Fall Creek. Services for Bowman will be at 1 p.m. in the Simon-Lounsbury Chapel with interment in Rest Haven Cemetery. Services for Hinkle will be in Buell Chapel at 2 p.m. with interment in Mt. Vernon Cemetery.

Action by Cottage Grove Streamlines Airport Plan

COTTAGE GROVE — The City of Cottage Grove is turning over its interest in the proposed airport here to the State Board of Aeronautics, The Register-Guard learned Friday.

The action came after city officials huddled in Salem Wednesday with Asst. Atty. Gen. Louis S. Bonney.

Mayor Wilbur L. Workman Sr., who attended the meeting, said the action should simplify the airport matter. He said it came at the request of Robert Dunn, director of the state board.

Workman reported that state officials pledged to condemn land on the proposed site if satisfactory arrangements can not be worked out with property owners.

An appraiser hired by the city has so far been unable to reach agreement with any of the property owners.

The decision will not affect the way in which funds to purchase the property are raised, according to Workman. Local sources, mainly the Woodard Foundation, a non-profit organization sponsored by the Woodard family, are putting up the money to buy the land.

Unless the city bowed out, a complicated transfer of money and property would have been necessary. The city would have taken over the land, deeded it to the Woodard Foundation, and the latter group would then have given it to the state.

This action would have been needed because under law one government body can not deed land to another government body.

With the city out of the picture, the state can acquire the land in the first step, speeding up the process, Workman said.

The proposed airport site is located in the Thornton Corners area, near the Village Green, east of Cottage Grove.

Selective Service Chairman Quits

Earl Hill of Cushman, a member of Local Board No. 13 of the Selective Service system since its formation some 20 years ago, has resigned as chairman of the board.

Edward R. Bailey of Eugene, an attorney, was elected chairman.

Hill, a former member of the Oregon Legislature, told board members that his resignation was due to travel difficulties from Cushman. He will remain on the board.

Other members of the Selective Service board are Frank F. Schramm of Cottage Grove, Worth Harvey of Eugene and Claude Gerlach of Springfield.

Lawrence to Join White House Staff

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gov. David Lawrence of Pennsylvania, who leaves office Jan. 15, has accepted an offer to be chairman of President Kennedy's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing.

Lawrence says he will be a member of the White House staff, and would assume his duties "as soon as I can get my affairs in Pennsylvania adjusted."
