Television Previews

Air Safety Probed
By Special on ABC

An ABC special tonight at 10:30 on Channels 9 and 12 features an in-depth probe of air safety in the United States.

"How Safe Is Flying?" presents information about the strides which aviation safety has made since the 1920s and outlines the hazards of faster flying and higher landing speeds. Also presented is the problem of building and expanding airports in time to meet landing requirements.

The program is dedicated to Eastern Airlines pilot Capt. Edward Bechtold, a safety expert who died in the kind of accident he was working to correct.

Other Tuesday previews:

8:30 p.m., Empire (13-8) — Guest star Jeremy Slate gives a strong performance in "The Loner" as an honest and determined young man who uses unconventional tactics to get a job

Movies

7:30 p.m. (2) — "A Message to Garcia." Wallace Beery, Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles. Army officer is entrusted with a vital message to deliver to the Cuban revolutionary leader. Well acted, interesting drama. (1936—good.)

11:30 p.m. (12) — "The Falcon's Brother." George Sanders, Tom Conway. When the Falcon is injured by enemy agents, his brother carries on. Routine mystery. (1942—fair.)

Wednesday (daytime):

9:30 a.m. (12) — "Whispering Ghosts." Milton Berle, Brenda Joyce. Milton gets a few laughs out of this film but not enough for success. He's out to solve a sea captain's murder and recover some buried treasure. (1942—fair.)

2:30 p.m. (2) — "Claudia." Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young. If you've never seen Rose Franken's almost classical story of a child bride who grows up, you're in for a treat. Funny but not hilarious, sentimental but not corny. (1943—good.)

3 p.m. (8) — "Tomorrow Is Another Day." Ruth Roman, Steve Cochran. Fast paced action drama about hoodlums and their women. Miss Roman tries to start a new life but her past proves too strong an obstacle. Good performances. (1951—good.)

4:15 p.m. (6) — "The Tenderfoot." Joe E. Brown, Ginger Rogers. Brown comedy with Joe as a cowboy who becomes involved with a group of people trying to get enough money to put their show on Broadway. (1932—fair.)

Long-Long Show
TV's New Trend

By RICK DU BROW
Of the United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — You know the late-late show. Now make way for the long-long one.

The way the network trend is going, never will so many people see so much of the same programs so often.

Come next fall, comedies will be just about the only weekly half-hour entertainment stories left. "The Rifleman" and "Have Gun, Will Travel" are going under, and the two new half-hour anthology dramas—"True" and the Lloyd Bridges show — are pretty well considered dead. The hour drama dominates for the present in prime-time. But the 90-minute program looms more and more.

The reasons include: The usual network desire to tie up viewers for a longer time against broadcasting opposition; the competition of three- and four-hour blockbuster movies; the lure of the fast-coming pay-TV; and other tempting future markets such as closed-circuit theater television. As the average citizen's leisure time increases, the competition to occupy him and divert his spending dollar becomes fiercer, particularly in view of other burgeoning recreations such as travel, do-it-yourself hobbies, boating, photography, increased outdoor living including swimming pools and interest in hi-fi and stereo.

The way for long-long shows has been paved by the "Today" and "Tonight" programs, by special news and sports events, by local movies.

Now, this season, we have two prime-time movies a week, on Saturday and Sunday. And starting two weeks from Monday night, there will be a third such film night, on Mondays.

NBC's "The Virginian," the first 90-minute dramatic weekly series, has made a go of it. ABC already has scheduled a 90-minute cops-robbers-and-trial series for next season, as well as a weekly two-hour Saturday night show with Jerry Lewis.

In addition, we have such long-long syndicated programs as Steve Allen's, as well as David Susskind's "Open End." And next season CBS-TV expands its evening news report to 30 minutes, which, combined with local station addenda, often runs to an hour or so.

"Ben Casey" was asked to expand to 90 minutes, but thus far has refused. Jack Paar is reported interested in doing a 90-minute show next season and NBC-TV is reported interested in having him replace Johnny Carson once a week on "Tonight." And hopeful producers are saying huge production costs of long-long weekly series can be made back by releasing the programs as movies overseas. In short, buy a cushion.

John Daly Plans
To Leave Show

NEW YORK (AP)—John Daly, the host and moderator of the CBS show, "What's My Line?" said Monday he plans to leave the program next October because of a contract dispute.

"I received an offer last week for a new five-year contract," Daly told a reporter, "but it was offered on a flat, nonnegotiable basis—take it or leave it. I felt that after 14 years with a program that this was somewhat less than responsible business manners."

"So, of course, I told them that I could not accept that kind of an offer. I must say that I am going to leave the program in early October."

In a recent Nielsen rating, "What's My Line?" was listed among the 10 most popular programs in the nation. Regular panel members are Arlene Francis, Bennett Cerf and Dorothy Kilgallen.
