Anti-Pollution Bill
Stirs Disagreement

SALEM (AP)—Industry and the State Sanitary Authority (SSA) agreed on the need for summary abatement of flagrant pollution, but they disagreed on the anti-pollution powers local governments should have.

The issues are at the core of a bill before the Senate Local Government Committee.

Court Injunctions

One part of the bill would let the SSA seek a court injunction against a polluter without going through the normal, lengthy hearing procedures that can drag out for months.

The other part would let cities and counties enact anti-pollution ordinances and would let local government units contract with each other for area-wide programs.

Representatives of the SSA, Associated Oregon Industries (AOI) and Crown Zellerbach said they agree the SSA should be able to seek a court injunction in flagrant cases.

They were asked to report back March 21 with specific language for such an amendment. There was disagreement over whether the agency should refer to "a dangerous degree of pollution" and whether a court hearing should be required prior to an injunction.

The industry representatives were unhappy with the section of the bill to give local units more anti-pollution powers. Charles Dubs of AOI said it would be a "step backward."

Complex Problems

"The problems of pollution are very complex and technical and at these levels it is almost impossible to secure competent and experienced personnel," he said. Dubs added that the AOI would back the SSA in seeking more general fund money for its work at the state level.

The SSA replied that local governments could control such areas as space heating and trash burning where it is hard for the SSA to reach. It said local units could supplement the state controls.

A spokesman of the Salem League of Voters said "much could be done by an interested community" in supplementing state controls.

The industry spokesman expressed satisfaction with the performance of the SSA and

Committee to Continue Work on Constitution

From AP, UPI Reports

SALEM—The nine members of the House Constitutional Revision Committee decided Tuesday that it would finish its job of preparing a new state constitution for the people to vote on.

It decided that its new document will be somewhere between the present Constitution and the one prepared by the 17-member Constitutional Revision Commission.

And the committee also decided that it might take some of the most controversial parts and submit them separately from the new constitution.

These controversial items might include the death penalty, appointment of all judges by the governor, and whether to let the courts throw out any laws they don't agree with.

Rep. John R. Dellenback, R-Medford, chairman of the committee, called the members together to decide whether they will go ahead, or give up.

The committee, meeting jointly with a Senate committee, is still holding hearings. The progress has been painfully slow.

The House Tuesday approved a measure to stiffen requirements for getting on the ballot via a nominating convention.

The new bill requires 1,000 people at an assembly to nominate for statewide office, instead of 250. It also requires the proceedings to be completed in one day.

The bill, recommended by the secretary of state, is an outgrowth of an election hassle last year in which a candidate tried to get nominated at a running convention lasting several days.

The measure goes to the Senate. By a 40-18 vote, the House sent to the Senate a bill to let cities with annual budgets of less than $20,000 come out from under the law requiring the secretary of state to audit cities.

It also sent to the Senate a bill to increase accumulated sick leave of school employees from 50 to 70 days.

Legislation to abolish rural school boards, and replace them with intermediate education districts, was introduced in the Senate Tuesday under sponsorship of the Legislative Interim Committee on Education.

The intermediate districts could embrace more than one county.

The proposal to study and draft plans for a graduate center for the Portland metropolitan area won support of the House Planning and Development committee.

The measure, which already has cleared the Senate, now goes to the floor of the House for action.

The Senate joint resolution calls for the State Board of Higher Education to draft plans for the proposed center and report to the 1965 Legislature.

A memorial asking Congress to enlarge the navigation locks at Bonneville Dam was passed by the Senate Tuesday. The House already had passed it.

The measure asks that the locks be as big as the larger locks at John Day and McNary dams.

Strong Yet Safe—Gives Hours of Continuous Relief from Minor

ARTHRITIS
PAINS

Reduces swelling and inflammation
so it's easier to move afflicted limbs again

No cure as yet has been found for arthritis. But medical research has established that the strong yet safe medication in Anacin® gives hours of relief from arthritis' minor pains—even such chronic pain arising from deep in joints. It has also been found an ingredient in Anacin has a special anti-inflammatory action that helps reduce swelling and inflammation—a basic cause of arthritis suffering. In minutes—pain is relieved so it's easier to move around and this helps keep joints from "locking" or "stiffening."

Anacin Tablets are like a doctor's prescription. That is, a combination of ingredients. Anacin contains the pain reliever doctors recommend the most, plus an extra ingredient not found in leading aspirins or buffered aspirins. Take as directed.
