UO Books 3 Lectures By Publisher

William A. Rusher, publisher of National Review and former counsel to the U.S. Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, will make three speaking appearances at the University of Oregon next Wednesday.

Rusher, whose visit to the University is sponsored by the Student Union Forum Committee and the University Young Republicans club, will speak at a luncheon meeting of the Political Science Club at 12 noon in the Erb Memorial Student Union. He will also talk at an informal coffee hour in the Student Union at 2:30 p.m. and at 4 p.m. will give a public lecture in the Union.

His public address topic will be "A Conservative's Strategy for the Cold War." He will discuss conservative criticism of America's foreign policy and give answers to the liberal query of "Well, what would you do?"

At the luncheon, Rusher will speak on "How Much Academic Freedom?" In this talk he will discuss the question of Communist teachers, of a solid academic grounding in certain truths, and of policy in America's classrooms.

Rusher is a graduate of Princeton University who received his law degree from Harvard Law School. He has had three civilian careers—as a practicing attorney in the litigation department of Wall Street's largest law firm, as an associate counsel to the Senate subcommittee investigating domestic Communism, and as publisher of National Review, America's leading conservative magazine.

In 1955 Rusher served as special counsel to the finance committee of the New York State Senate, investigating the appointees of Gov. Averell Harriman. In his work with the U.S. Senate subcommittee he has participated in hundreds of public and secret hearings throughout the country. In this same position he prepared the way for the subcommittee's hearings in Honolulu.
