Hungarian Pair Meet, Wed

By ANN CONNELL

A wedding which reads like a fictional tale of romance was to take place Saturday afternoon in LaJolla, Calif., and its principals are both from Eugene.

The bride is Miss Julianna Hegyi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ferenc Hegyi of Budapest, Hungary; the bridegroom is Endre Bartanyi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Laszlo Bartanyi of Miskole, Hungary. Both born in Hungary, they escaped to this country about the same time, but were not together, had never met. They have discovered that both attended the same hall in their homeland on one occasion, but nothing brought them together at that time.

She came to Seattle, and he to Carmel in California. It was in Seattle, on a skiing trip, that they met, through the offices of a mutual friend who thought they should know each other and served as the hand of Fate.

Miss Hegyi, who had been a student nurse in her homeland, completed her work as a licensed practical nurse and was so employed in Seattle. Mr. Bartanyi, who had been in his first year of study to become an architect at University of Budapest, continued his studies in this country. He had come to Eugene to study at University of Oregon, at the time of their meeting, and through a correspondence which followed their meeting, persuaded her to come here and enroll, as well. For the past two years, she has lived in Eugene, has been a part-time student at U of O, and has worked also for Town and Travel.

Mr. Bartanyi completed his work for his degree early this year, and now is employed as an architect in LaJolla, where she went to join him late in the past week.

The wedding was set for Saturday afternoon in the Catholic church named for Mary, Star of the Sea, and the Rt. Rev. Msgr. V. Clarkin was to read the rites. Friends of the groom were to attend the couple, and dinner would be given by the same friends following the wedding.

Miss Hegyi's wedding attire was a sheath dress of Irish linen lace in off-white, with matching linen coat. The dress, with which she planned to wear a brief, plain veil of illusion, had square neck and short sleeves. She would wear elbow-length gloves, and slippers of white linen with insets of Irish lace to match her dress. Her flowers were to be white carnations. With her bridal dress, she would wear an ivory bracelet which had been her mother's, one of the few things which she brought with her from her homeland.

They did not plan a wedding trip at this time; it was a long journey which brought them together to make their home in a new country, it is enough. But someday, they plan to go back together—if not to Hungary, to some city near its borders where their parents may come for a joyful reunion.

Junction City Church is Setting for Wedding

Baskets of white gladiolus and turquoise-tinted chrysanthemums on the altar of Junction City Methodist Church set the color theme for the marriage April 13 of Miss Carol Jean King to Claude Wayne Nelson. The Rev. Wayne Brown performed the double-ring ceremony at 4 p.m.

Miss King is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob L. King of Junction City. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Lois E. Nelson of Arcata, Calif.

The bride wore a gown of taffeta fashioned with long-sleeved bodice of Chantilly lace. The skirt, featuring a scissor pleat at front, extended into a chapel train. Her veil of illusion was held by a pillbox of pearl-embroidered lace and she carried white chrysanthemums and turquoise-tinted carnations.

Mrs. Isabelle Pierce of Springfield, matron of honor, wore a gown of turquoise chiffon styled with overblouse and flowing panels at the back. Miss Sharon Smyth and Miss Charlotte Smyth, bridesmaids, wore gowns of pale turquoise chiffon. All wore veiled headaddresses and carried bouquets of white carnations and turquoise chrysanthemums.

Michael R. Van was best man and ushers were Steven Nelson and Mark Ritthaler. Miss Sandra Halfner was vocalist.

Miss Janis Nelson and Miss Sue Raffin took care of gifts and Miss Jacquelyn LeGall of Portland presented the guest book.

For their wedding trip to the coast the bride wore a citrus yellow coat over a white dress.

The couple will make their home in Springfield at 1068 N. 20th St.
