

Cuts

One of the nine programs on Seattle Central's list of proposed cutbacks is its 65-year-old apparel-design program, which trains students in the design and manufacture of clothing. Graduates go on to design for Nordstrom, Cutter & Buck and REI, among others, said Camila Sigelmann, coordinator of the program.

"It's the greatest program nobody knows about," student Cielle Miller said. She started her training at a private fashion academy in Italy, "and it was nowhere near as good as this."

If programs are eliminated, students already enrolled will be able to finish, said Wakefield. Not every program on the list will be eliminated, and the school is looking for alternative ways to fund them. A final decision will be made by mid-June.

The proposed tuition increases also are a concern. Hanson, of Renton Technical College, said some students will have to take out larger student loans, leaving them in debt after they graduate.

Others may not be able to attend anymore. Under the proposed increase, tuition for full-time students would jump from about $3,100 a year now to $3,800 by 2013.

Earl and Hanson both advise students planning to attend a community college this fall to register as early as possible to avoid getting closed out of a class they need.

"For anybody who's interested: Go early," Earl said. "You don't want to wait until the first week of school."

WSU-Vancouver Offers Wide Variety of Study

Washington State University Vancouver provides quality education to the residents of Southwest Washington and the Portland metropolitan area. With a student population of 3,000, WSU Vancouver offers a small-college atmosphere with public university access. The beautiful 351-acre campus is located just 10 miles north of Portland up I-5 or I-205.

Education - WSU Vancouver delivers personalized education that enhances the intellectual, creative and practical abilities of its students. The university currently offers 18 bachelor's degrees, 10 master's degrees and more than 37 fields of study.

Bachelor's degrees - anthropology, biology, business administration, computer science, digital technology and culture, education, electrical engineering, English, environmental science, history, human development, humanities, mechanical engineering, nursing, psychology, public affairs, social sciences and sociology.

Master's degrees - accounting (MACC), business administration (MBA), computer science (MS), education (EdM), environmental science (MS), history (MA), mechanical engineering (MS), nursing (MN), public affairs (MPA), and teaching (MIT).

WSU Vancouver also offers a doctorate degree in education (Ed.D.).

Research - WSU Vancouver is a premier research university. More than 130 doctoral teaching scholars work side-by-side with graduate and undergraduate students in computer, engineering, multimedia, nursing, psychology and science laboratories. Together they conduct research of regional, national and international impact—fueling economic growth and development in our region.

Campus and Student Life - The WSU Vancouver campus features a bookstore, cafeteria, student commons, student services center, study hall areas, art galleries, a sports court, fitness center and a system of biking and pedestrian trails. The library is stocked with more than 30,000 books, access to more than 100 databases, 9,000 full-text online journals, and extensive web connections that make it a personal gateway to worldwide research materials.

Student life centers around a variety of activities, including an active student government and nearly 50 registered student organizations.

Scholarships - Roughly 75 percent of WSU Vancouver's student population takes advantage of some form of scholarship or financial aid to help finance their education. Workshops on how to apply for both are offered regularly and experts are available to lend a hand in the Office of Financial Aid and Scholarships at (360) 546-9559 or by e-mailing finaid@vancouver.wsu.edu.
