Jasmine

JG: I've always known the greatness of black people. We come from intellectuals, philosophers, educators and activists. We are not a monolithic group of people bound by color. It is up to us as individuals, parents, teachers and communicators to teach that to our people and our broader community. I think it's dangerous to depend on the media or the entertainment industry to facilitate that knowledge.

KW: Patricia also says: You directed the musical I Dream and the play The Colored Museum. Would you consider directing a movie in the future?

JG: I would love to direct a movie, something I really like with a great cast. What a dream!

KW: Thanks again for the time, Jasmine.

JG: Thank you, Kam.
