

Thara Memory’s American Music Program Plays for King School

Jazz legend Thara Memory brought young musicians from the American Music Program to a benefit May 18 for King School. The school has the “highest year-to-year academic growth of any PreK-8 in the district this year. It is now listed as a top-tier school in the area of academic growth, exceeding both state and district averages in reading and math overall.”

Art for Social Change

Art was on the table at the Law and Disorder Conference, Saturday, May 11, at Portland State University. This workshop was “Screen Printing for Social Change,” taught by Rio Safari, printer, zinester and member of Counteract Collective. The well-organized and attended event included a wide variety of workshops on legal issues, political activism and community organizing.
