

Lee Daniels Speaks on ‘The Butler,’ Trayvon and Race

Kam Williams
Special To The Skanner News

Lee Daniels is best known for directing and producing the Academy Award-winning film Precious which was nominated for a half-dozen Oscars in 2010, including histwo for Best Picture and Best Director. Mo’Nique won for Best Supporting Actress while scriptwriter Geoffrey Fletcher landed another for Best Adapted Screenplay.

Lee’s production company, Lee Daniels Entertainment, made its feature film debut in 2001 with Monster’s Ball, the dysfunctional family drama for which Halle Berry would earn her historic, Best Actress Oscar. Last year, he wrote, produced and directed The Paperboy, an adaptation of the Pete Dexter novel starring Matthew McConaughey, Zac Efron, John Cusack, and Nicole Kidman.

Here, he talks about his new picture, The Butler, a civil rights epic recounting the real-life story of an African-American who served in the White House at the pleasure of eight presidents, from 1952 to 1986.

Kam Williams: Hey Lee, what a phenomenal film!

Lee Daniels: Did you like it?

KW: I loved it!

LD: Thanks, Kam.

KW: I was born in the Fifties so all of the ground you cover in terms of the father-son relationship and the Civil Rights Movement resonated with me and touched me very deeply.

LD: That makes me feel good. Thank you very much.

KW: So, what inspired you to make the movie?

LD: What attracted me to the project was the father-son story which I looked at as a love story with the Civil Rights Movement as a backdrop. That was intriguing to me both because I’d had issues with my own dad, and because I have issues with my teenage son. I think the father-son love story is a universal one which transcends color. That’s what was sort of there on the page, but it wasn’t until I started shooting that we began getting into the Woolworth’s sit-ins and the Freedom Riders with the Molotov cocktails that I asked myself, “What have I stumbled upon?” It was then that I realized the film was much bigger than just the father-son story.

KW: Did you decide to tackle the civil rights material because of the Trayvon Martin shooting?

LD: No, it hadn’t happened when Danny Strong wrote the script, including the line “Any white man can kill any of us at any time and get away with it.”

KW: You got Oscar-winners in Forest Whitaker, Cuba Gooding, Jr., Jane Fonda, Vanessa Redgrave, Robin Williams and Melissa Leo, and Oscar-nominees in Terrence Howard and Oprah Winfrey to come aboard. How were you able to assemble such an outstanding cast?

Lee Daniels

LD: My usual way... throwing out a net, and fishing. [LOL] This one was easy because the material was so good. The actors I approached took the bait because they wanted to serve the material. We really didn’t have any money to pay them, so most of them lost money in relation to what their normal acting fee would be.

KW: Harriet Pakula-Teweles asks: How has the tempest over re-using the title The Butler affected you?

LD: Well, I just finished editing the movie five days ago. When did you see it, Kam?

KW: Earlier today.

‘I hope that this film rips a scab off the sore that is racism in America today’

LD: Well, I’m not sure which version you saw. Anyway, when I’m working on a movie, it’s like being in a cocoon. I considerate it like giving birth, and I don’t leave the bubble, because if I do, then it’s bad and affects the child. But I was pulled out for a minute when my kids told me about something they saw online. I didn’t even hear about it from the studio. It disturbed me, but I didn’t have time to think about it.

KW: Well, it’s now called “Lee Daniels’ The Butler.”

LD: The MPAA [Motion Pictures Association of America] gave me that title and I still don’t know how to feel about it. I just finished giving birth to the movie. “Lee Daniels’ The Butler!” It sounds like “The Greatest Show on Earth!”

KW: Well Tyler Perry, Dino De Laurentis and others are famous for placing their names before the title?

LD: I’m not Tyler Perry. I’m not Dino De Laurentis. I think it’s a bit much to put one’s name in front of the film. It makes me uncomfortable. Here’s the thing. Insiders like you know the whole story and about the legal issues, but not the average person. I worry that young kids in Oklahoma or Alabama might end up asking, “Who is this filmmaker to be so full of himself?” That bothers me. The MPAA handed down this edict. So, I don’t know how I feel about it right now. Ask me tomorrow. [Chuckles]

KW: My eyes must have welled up at least a half-dozen times while watching the film. As the director, you must be too close to the film for it to have that sort of emotional effect on you.

LD: No, when I actually sat down all alone to watch the final cut just for pleasure, I broke down in tears.

KW: You did a masterful job of portraying the tensions and differences between the Civil Rights and Black Power Generations.

LD: There was no right and wrong. Cecil [played by Forest Whitaker] was right and so was his son [played by David Oyelowo]. You’ve got a problem when neither is wrong, yet you have a conflict.

KW: I also appreciated the evenhanded way in which you approached each of the presidents Cecil served under, like how Reagan could give his African-American help a raise to make their pay equal to that of whites, while hypocritically still supporting Apartheid in South Africa.

LD: Ain’t that interesting? We don’t make Kennedy out to be a Goody Two-Shoes either.

KW: Editor/Legist Patricia Turnier was wondering whether you’ve seen the TV miniseries “Backstairs at the White House?”

LD: I did. I think it was a great movie for its time, but I wanted to avoid the episodic feeling of that film.

KW: Patricia also asks: What message do you want the public to take away from “The Butler?”

LD: I hate that question, Patricia, because it forces me to be philosophical... I think the message is that we have got a long way to go. I hope that this film rips a scab off the sore that is racism in America today.

KW: Thanks again for the time, Lee, and best of luck with the film.

LD: Thanks, Kam.

COMMUNITY CALENDAR

SEATTLE 2013

If you have an event you want to share with the community, email it two weeks in advance to The Skanner at info@theskanner.com

Friday August 9

SING ALONG THE TUGBOAT ARTHUR FOSS: Sea Chanteys and other sea songs celebrate our connections to the sea, ships, skippers and sailors. FREE. 7:30 p.m. – 9:30 p.m. South Lake Union Park, 845 Terry Ave. N.

Saturday August 10

FAMILY FEST AND CAR SHOW – SOUTHWEST TEEN LIFE CENTER: Concession stand, live entertainment, bounce houses, free swim (1 p.m.

– 2 p.m.), fancy cars and much more. 11 a.m. – 5 p.m. 2801 SW Thistle St. (South lot)

CELEBRATE WOODINVILLE – ALL DAY COMMUNITY FESTIVAL: This festival is free, community event where families, friends and neighbors can gather to enjoy music, wine, food and fun activities. 11 a.m. – 6 p.m. Wilmot Gateway Park, 17301 – 131 St. Ave. NE

Sunday August 11

CELEBRATE EID AL-FITR AT THE SEATTLE PUBLIC LIBRARY: Join us for a cultural celebration of EID AL-FILT, the end of Ramadan, from 2 p.m. – 4 p.m. at The Seattle Public Library, New Holly Branch, 7058 32nd Ave. S.

Monday August 12

EVENING BOOK GROUP: Join us for a book group at the Magnolia Branch Library. Everyone is welcome to join in on the discussion. This month's title is “Shirley” by Charlotte Bronte. 6:30 p.m. Magnolia Branch, 2801 34th Ave. W

Wednesday August 14

ANNUAL KIDS CARNIVAL: For ages 12 and under. Celebrate summer with your friends and laugh and play while you enjoy carnival games, and much more.$3.00 1 p.m. – 3 p.m. Ravenna Eckstein Community Center, 6535 Ravenna Ave. NE

Saturday August 17

SEATTLE CENTER FESTAL INDIGENOUS CULTURES DAY HIGHLIGHTS NATIVE CULTURES FROM ACROSS THE GLOBE: Indigenous Cultures Day seeks to bring together people divided by cultural differences. The days entertainment touches native cultures from across the globe. 10 a.m. – 7 p.m. Seattle Center Armory and Mural Amphitheatre. FREE

Sunday August 18

INTERNATIONAL MUSIC & ARTS FESTIVAL CAPS RAINIER VALLEY CULTURE FEST WEEKEND: Come dance with us. A world of ethnic variety will convene with music, dancers, food, art activities, and booths. Noon – 6 p.m. Othello Park located one block east of the intersection of Othello Street and Martin Luther King, Jr. Way.

Page 2 The Seattle Skanner August 7, 2013