

National Night Out

Thousands of local residents all over the city gathered for neighborhood parties to commemorate National Night Out Against Crime Aug. 7. In North Portland, PCC Cascade drew a crowd despite the blistering 90 degree-plus heat, offering ice cream, a clown, educational activities and more. Law enforcement professionals rubbed elbows with local families. At right, Jodell Wright, a parole and probation officer at Multnomah County, helped a youngster with her ice cream cone. Many more parties in North and Northeast parts of the city offered live music, food and fun.

Healthy Festival

People who attended the annual Kidney Health Fest for African American Families Saturday, June 22, at Van Asselt Elementary School, could enjoy healthy snacks along with a nutritious lunch prepared by local chefs. This year's Fest was dedicated to coach and mentor Willie Austin, a man who dedicated his life to helping others get healthy and fit. People attending the Fest could get health screenings for kidney disease, sickle-cell and HIV as well as have their glucose and cholesterol checked. There were also a variety of exhibitors, speakers and demonstrations and activities for kids.
