Girl Scouts of Oregon and Southwest Washington Offers Summer Camp

Hiking, swimming, canoeing, horseback riding, arts and crafts, mountain biking and backpacking (with bikes and backpacks provided) are just some of the activities being offered at Girl Scout camp this summer.

“At Girl Scout camp, girls discover exciting activities with new friends, challenge their limits with supportive adults by their side, and learn to be leaders as they help plan their own fun-filled adventures. Families will be amazed at the skills and confidence their girl brings home,” says Sarah Miller, director of communications for Girl Scouts of Oregon and Southwest

Washington.

Girl Scout camp programs range from a few days to multiple weeks, and run June 28 through August 15. The camp is open to all girls, regardless of Girl Scout membership. Financial assistance is available, which can include low or no cost camp experiences depending on family need. Explore camp programs and register online at girlscoutsw.org/camp or call us for more information at 800-338-5248.

You Matter Basketball Clinic

Two Jefferson High basketball standouts who went on to play at the University of Kansas are bringing their talents back home for a one-day basketball clinic.

Best friends Aaron Miles and Michael Lee have organized the You Matter Basketball Clinic to be held at Self Enhancement Inc. from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. this Saturday.

This clinic is strictly for seventh and ninth grade boys, and will feature officers from the Portland Police Bureau showing their skills on the court all as part of the organizers effort to better community relations between youth and police and curb gun violence.

“Our main emphasis will be police interaction and gang and gun violence prevention,” Miles says.

“We will have police officers come and interact with the kids and we will encourage positive working relationships between them. We will also have a reformed gang member addressing the young men.

“Our community is dear to us and this is our way of addressing real issues with our youth.”

Early STEM Education

Over the next decade, demand for science, technology, engineering, and mathematics jobs (also known as STEM) is expected to increase four-fold, according to organizers at iD Tech Camps.

Expose your kids to these fields early with the iD Tech Camps at Lewis and Clark College, where youth between the age of seven and 17 years old can learn to program, code apps, modify Minecraft, design video games and more.

For more information about getting your kid into an iD Tech camp contact Elise by phone at (408) 466-4792- or by email at elise@iDTech.com.
