Terrence

Kam Williams: Hey Terrence, thanks for the time.

Terrence J: Thank you so much, Kam.

KW: What interested you in the script for The Perfect Match?

TJ: I don't think it was called The Perfect Match at the time, but it had some really amazing characters. And I'd been working with Queen Latifah and Flavor Unit [her production company] for quite some time. When we were able to develop it into a great story with dynamic characters, it became a no-brainer and a project I really wanted to be a part of.

KW: Who put together such a talented cast with people like Paula Patton, Lauren London, Cassie Ventura, Kali Hawk, Brandy Norwood and Donald Faison? And even that scene stealer, Beau Casper Smart, was terrific in a minor role.

TJ: Yeah, Casper was great! It was definitely a collaborative effort. Billie [director Billie Woodruff] made some decisions. Queen Latifah's team made some decisions. I had my hand in it, and we had great casting directors [Kimberly Hardin and Natasha Ward]. We all came together.

KW: How did you prepare to play Charlie?

TJ: I really wanted to nail this character, so I worked with an acting coach. I was heavily inspired by Eddie Murphy in Boomerang and a lot of my favorite movies growing up. Charlie's a multi-layered character, and I devoted a lot of time to working on him so that I felt like I knew him by the time we shot.

KW: Although this movie is unique in its own right, it did remind me of a couple films, Love Jones and The Best Man. I'd rank it right up there with those urban classics,

TJ: Thank you so much!

KW: What message do you think people will take away from The Perfect Match?

TJ: This is a coming-of-age story about growing up. A lot of times, guys think we can get away with things. In the case of Charlie, he meets his match -- a girl who really helps him mature and to look at relationships, his career and other aspects of his life in a new way. That's what I hope people take away from the film.

KW: Harriet Pakula-Teweles asks: With so many classic films being redone, is there a remake you'd like to star in?

TJ: Not really one in particular. I love any script that tells a good story.

KW: The Viola Davis question: What's the biggest difference between who you are at home as opposed to the person we see on the red carpet?

TJ: They couldn't be more different from each other. I've really learned to compartmentalize the different parts of my life. I work really hard. Today, I was up at 6 am and, from the moment I woke up, it's been go-go-go, from shooting a show in the morning to doing press in the afternoon. That calls for a lot of balance. So, I definitely need to know when to turn it off and just take some time for myself to relax. I've gotten very good about scheduling time for myself when I don't have to be "on."

KW: Ling-Ju Yen asks: What is your earliest childhood memory?

TJ: Wow! I've never been asked that question before. Let me think... riding on the train with my mom.

KW: What was your very first job?

TJ: Selling shoes at a Footlocker in the mall. And that's how I met the guy from the radio station in Rocky Mount, N.C., who gave me my first internship. I sold him a pair of sneakers. I fell in love with radio once I started working there, and I never stopped.
