Jacob was featured in "Ride Along" opposite Ice Cube, Kevin Hart and John Leguizamo, and in the sci-fi thriller The Maze Runner. The year before, he starred as Langston in Black Nativity, working with alongside Forest Whitaker, Angela Bassett, Tyrese Gibson, Jennifer Hudson, Mary J. Blige and Nas.

Besides acting, a triple threat Jacob is a dancer and R&B singer. His album, Connection, was released last December.

A native of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Jacob currently resides in Atlanta, Georgia. Here, he talks about his latest movie, Sleight, where he stars as a street magician who starts dealing drugs to support himself and his sister after the death of their single-mom.

Kam Williams: What interested you in "Sleight"?

Jacob Latimore: "Sleight" is the kind of film you dream about. Sleight balanced the genres of science fiction, romance, family and reality in one story. I was completely drawn into the character and the complex issues he faces. It's not often you get a script that allows you to stretch your own ability as an actor and I saw the ability to do that with this film.

KW: How would you describe the film in 25 words or less?

JL: It's a genre-bending superhero origin story. Although it focuses on a street magician, "Sleight" ultimately is a story about the lengths a person will go to protect his family.

KW: How would you describe your character, Bo?

JL: Bo is a guy who is passionate about magic and in his own way strives to do something with his magic that has never been done before. He's determined. Due to his parents deaths, he needed to grow up faster than he anticipated because he has to raise his younger sister. And what he learns as a grown-up affects everything he does.

Local Pastors From Diverse Communities Join Legacy Emanuel's Spiritual Care Intern Program

Frisco "Chris" Delaney with Grace Community Church in Gresham and Terry McCray Hill, the senior pastor of Bethel AME Church in Portland were selected to participate in Legacy Emanuel Medical Center's 12-week spiritual care internship program.

The medical center secured a grant to fund internships at no cost to spiritual leaders interested in receiving specialized training to be able to minister and provide comfort healing in acute care settings, such as a trauma center. Legacy Emanuel services a diverse, multi-faith, patient population and was seeking more pastors who reflect the patients served.

The Rev. Jill Rowland, M.Div., D.Min., serves as a staff chaplain at the medical center and is a member of the Clinical Pastoral Education (CPE) faculty. "The CPE program is designed for community clergy, like Chris and Terry, who are looking to complete this training while sending time in their congregation or current ministry setting," says Dr. Rowland. "We are pleased to have both of them enrolled in our program."

Stories told by Vanport survivors and others closely related to the era focus on life in Vanport and the 1948 Memorial Day flood when a dike broke on the Columbia River. The rising waters completely destroyed Vanport, Oregon, the city built by industrialist and ship builder Henry J. Kaiser. Immediately following the screening there will be a discussion.
