Volunteers Needed to Advise on Development Plans for Seattle University and Swedish First Hill

Here's your chance to advise the City on the development plans of either Seattle University or Swedish First Hill campus. Seattle Department of Neighborhoods is seeking interested community members from surrounding neighborhoods to participate on one of the Standing Advisory Committees (SAC) for these two institutions. Each committee provides feedback on projects planned and under development by the institution or school to ensure it complies with its Master Plan. The Master Plan describes zoning rules, long range planning of the property, and transportation planning.

Community members who have experience in neighborhood organizing and issues, land use and zoning, architecture or landscape architecture, economic development, building development, educational services, or just an interest in their neighborhood's future are encouraged to apply.

The committees meet in the evenings on the institution's campus one to four times a year. Committee members serve a two-year renewable term. If you are interested in serving on one of these committees, send a letter of interest by either e-mail or regular mail by Friday, January 19 to:

For more information contact Richard Fink, Seattle Department of Neighborhoods, at 206-386-1948.

The City of Seattle is committed to promoting diversity in its boards and committees; women, young adults, senior citizens, persons with disabilities, sexual and gender minorities, persons of color, and immigrants are highly encouraged to apply.

The Major Institutions and Schools Program provides a way for neighbors of Seattle's hospitals, universities, and colleges to be directly involved in the development plans for those institutions to ensure neighborhood concerns are considered when those plans are made. It is a program of Seattle Department of Neighborhoods.

Washington DOH Passes Groundbreaking Rule Creating a New Gender Option for Birth Certificates

Rule creates gender marker "X" for those who identify as a gender that is not exclusively male or female

On Monday, the Washington State Department of Health passed a new rule that simplifies the process for a person to change the gender listed on their birth certificate. The rule also creates a gender marker X, which represents a gender that is not exclusively male or female (such as nonbinary, intersex, agender, genderfluid, genderqueer, transgender, Two Spirit, and others).

Washington is one of only three states and Washington D.C. to acknowledge people outside the gender binary on government documents. Gender equity and transgender rights advocates — including Gender Justice League, Legal Voice, Pride Foundation, and Ingersoll Gender Center — praised the DOH for taking steps to recognize all Washingtonians as who they are.

Currently, state law requires either a court order or a doctor's letter if a person needs to change the gender listed on their birth certificate. Even then, the gender options are restricted to male and female. Under the new rule, adults will have the right to self-attest to the gender marker change, without a court order or doctor's letter. However, minors will still need a statement from an approved health care provider, and a parent or legal guardian will need to complete the application.

The alternative to the binary designations applies only to minors and adults who apply to update their birth certificates.

The gender marker options for newborns will still be male and female and undetermined. Further, the process for updating gender markers on other state identification—such as a driver license or ID card—remains unchanged.

Kreidler Proposes Bill to Stabilize Health Insurance Market, Reduce Premium Costs

Insurance Commissioner Mike Kreidler is proposing legislation to help provide stability and confidence that over 300,000 people are able to maintain coverage in Washington's individual health insurance market.

Kreidler's proposed reinsurance program would encourage more health plan options in the 2019 individual market and lower premium increases by up to 10 percent.

Reinsurance provides health insurers partial reimbursement for high-cost medical claims that exceed a certain threshold. These type of claims typically involve extremely serious health issues, such as cancer, complications from diabetes and pre-mature births, among others.
