tagon Papers,” the top secret files refute the irrationally-optimistic assessment being presented to the public by the president. The decision to publish the documents was a no-brainer for the Post’s editor, Ben Bradlee (Hanks), and owner,

Katharine Graham (Streep). What ensued was a Constitutional crisis ultimately settled by the U.S. Supreme Court which had to weigh the Freedom of the Press against President Nixon’s (Curzon Dobell) request for an injunction preventing dissemination of the classified documents in the interest of national security. Too bad the story Spiel-berg opted to tell is primarily a tale of female empowerment that quite frankly doesn’t ring true. Why resort to revisionist history reflecting present-day values when simply ratcheting up the tension around the original landmark legal case probably would’ve proved far more riveting? Very Good ★★★
