D.C. He was 17 — just one year older than Taiyana when she died.

"[His death] was something that she had to carry with [her]," sister Tiashaundra Thompson said.

For years, Taiyana yearned for her father, her family said.

Taiyana's sister Tiana said two have been reunited in death.

"He's gone and she's up there with him," she said, "and that's all that she basically ever wanted. That's all she ever needed. Nothing here on this earth, on this world, could've satisfied her but that."

Lajoyina Thompson said her daughter left her a message in a post Taiyana made on social media.

In the comment, written weeks before her passing, Taiyana referred to her mother as a "strong, beautiful, young, black queen."

"I think that's why I'm able to stay as strong as I am," her mother said, "because that was my daughter's last image of me, and I want to uphold that image that she left having of me."

movement can go in and change the hearts of men. There's still a lot of racism in the communities and I'm not sure how you can ever make that go away."

King assassination was April 4, 1968

The poll was taken about six weeks ahead of the 50th anniversary of King's death.

King was shot and killed April 4, 1968, outside his second-floor room at the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tennessee, by segregationist James Earl Ray. King has since been acknowledged as an American hero for his quest for freedom, justice, equality and peace among all races.

The poll found only one area — voting rights — where a majority said a lot of progress has been made for racial equality since the civil rights movement.

In total, 57 percent of Americans said there has been major progress on equal voting rights, though just 39 percent said there has been major progress on political representation for African Americans.

Close to half said there has been major progress on reducing segregation in public life — 47 percent — and equal access to good education — 48 percent.

About a third said there has been at least some progress in those areas.

Nearly half say little to no progress on criminal justice

On the lowest end of the spectrum, just 23 percent said there has been a great deal of progress in fair treatment of Blacks by police or the criminal justice system, and nearly half said there has been little to no progress in either of those areas.

Whites were more likely than Blacks to think there has been progress in every area asked about in the poll.

Blacks are "claiming racism but I don't see it myself," said Tommy Romero, 47, of Louisiana, who is White.

"They're claiming it but it's all about what they feel about the past, slavery and everything else."

Romero said that things overall have gotten much better considering the racism of the past, especially in the South.

"Things were terrible back then," he said. "The way minorities were treated, drinking at separate fountains, eating at separate restaurants, and sitting on certain parts of the bus, stuff like that, police beating on them, that just made no sense."

Republicans see progress more than Democrats

In general, 54 percent of Republicans and just 14 percent of Democrats think most or all of the goals of the civil rights movement have been achieved.

That ranged from 76 percent of Republicans and 46 percent of Democrats saying there has been a lot of progress on voting rights, to 43 percent of Republicans and 9 percent of Democrats saying there has been a lot of progress on fair treatment by police.
