scoured a wooded area and nearby towns. A private investigator was hired by the family.

Last May 5, the National Day of Awareness for Missing and Murdered Native Women and Girls, the Meskwaki Tribe helped organize a "Bring Her Home" walk to raise money for a continued search.

"I think about her every day," her mother says. "I pray every night and I pray every morning that she's going to be found, wherever she's at. I know I have to take care of her kids. That's what keeps me going."

Papakee was a mother of four; her two sons and two daughters range from 11 to 25.

She loved to bake — snickerdoodle cake was her specialty — and go all-out celebrating the holidays with her kids, searching for pumpkins at Halloween, planning New Year's parties for them.

Since her disappearance, her oldest daughter

This missing person poster provided by Lost and Missing in Indian Country is seeking information in the 2016 disappearance of Freda Knowshisgun. Knowshisgun's family on the Crow Indian Reservation in Montana began to worry something truly terrible may have happened when an aunt passed away in the fall of 2016 and she didn't come home. "It sits on our chest and shoulders," her sister Frances Knowshisgun says.

has given birth to a son.

Roberts says her daughter had been in and out of treatment for her alcohol use and later got involved with a man who was using methamphetamines.

She's heard all kinds of rumors, including the possibility she was a victim of sex trafficking. But she has no answers, despite a $25,000 reward for information.

"It's terrible," Roberts says, "trying to live each day going on, but not knowing where she is and what happened to her."

The last time Tan-ya Begay spoke to her mother she had called early one morning in March 2017, saying she planned to travel from the tiny Arizona town of Leupp back to her family's home near Gallup, New Mexico — a drive that should've taken just a few hours, from one part of the vast Navajo Nation to another.

A day earlier, Begay had made a stop near Tohatchi, New Mexico, to visit a relative's home with her boyfriend, marking the last time any of her relatives had seen her, according to a police report.

with campaign finance law violations and hush money payments, state Treasury spokeswoman Jennifer Sciortino told the AP that "we expect our investment partners to invest in good businesses with strong management teams that follow all applicable laws." She declined to say whether New Jersey had discussed AMI with Chatham, but said, "We are in regular contact with our investment partners regarding underlying portfolio companies and we provide feedback when appropriate."

In an interview last Friday, Cooperman deferred most questions to Chatham and AMI, describing himself as a passive investor and calling his 7 percent stake in the company "negligible."

The confidential financial document obtained by the AP states that AMI's $882 million in long-term debt owed to creditors as of March is a competitive disadvantage that may compromise its ability to launch new projects, borrow additional money or even pay for "general corporate requirements."

Cooperman told the AP that AMI has lined up a prominent investment bank to help with its upcoming effort to raise capital and that he expects a prospective deal to be launched after Labor Day. He said he expects AMI to convert more of its debt to shares in the company as part of that refinancing.

While the details of AMI's financial difficulties described in the confidential document haven't been previously reported, the prospect that Pecker and AMI might not protect Trump's secrets forever has long been a concern.

In July, Cohen released an audio recording in which the men discussed plans to buy McDougal's story of an affair with Trump from the National Enquirer. Such a purchase was necessary, they suggested, to prevent Trump from having to permanently rely on a tight relationship with the tabloid.

"You never know where that company — you never know what he's gonna be," Cohen says.

"David gets hit by a truck," Trump says.

"Correct," Cohen replies. "So, I'm all over that."

According to the documents accompanying Cohen's guilty plea last week, Trump's purchase of McDougal's story never occurred.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

METRO — Oregon Convention Center Portable Ticket Kiosk RFP 3547

Metro, a metropolitan service district organized under the laws of the State of Oregon and the Metro Charter, located at 600 NE Grand Avenue, Portland, OR 97232-2736, is requesting proposals for Portable Ticket Kiosk for the Oregon Convention Center. Sealed proposals are due no later than 2:00 PM Pacific Time, September 27, 2018, in Metro's business offices at 600 NE Grand Avenue, Portland, OR 97232-2736, Attention: Jon Deveaux, Procurement Analyst, RFP 3547. The purpose of this RFP is to seek proposals from qualified firms to provide Ticketing Kiosks and ongoing support. The OCC is undergoing a renovation of much of the facility, which includes removal of the existing traditional interior and exterior box office windows. Traditional box offices will not be replaced as part of this or future scopes of work. As such OCC will require alternate methods for ticketing transactions. Proposals can be viewed and downloaded from the Oregon Procurement Information Network (ORPIN), at <http://orpin.oregon.gov/open.dll/>. Metro may accept or reject any or all bids, in whole or in part, or waive irregularities not affecting substantial rights if such action is deemed in the public interest. Metro extends equal opportunity to all persons and specifically encourages minority, women-owned and emerging small businesses to access and participate in this and all Metro projects, programs and services. Metro and its contractors will not discriminate against any person(s), employee or applicant for employment based on race, color, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, age, religion, disability, political affiliation or marital status. Metro fully complies with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and related statutes and regulations in all programs and activities. For more information, or to obtain a Title VI Complaint Form, see www.oregonmetro.gov.
