Thousands in Bahamas Struggle to Find Work

Hurricane survivors worry they will be forced into deep poverty after destruction of businesses

By DÁNICA COTO Associated Press

FREEPORT, Bahamas Jobs are scarce, savings are running low and money is barely trickling in.

As survivors of Hurricane Dorian enter week three of post-storm life, many in the northwestern Bahamas, known for its casinos, golf courses and mega yachts, worry they will be forced into deep poverty as they scramble to find work in the aftermath of the Category 5 storm that wreaked havoc on two islands.

"People say, 'You're going to be all right,' but those are mere words." said Edna Gelin, who was the manager of a natural hair store in Freeport on Grand Ba-

People line up to buy pre-paid cell phone cards, for sale from a mobile Aliv office, after the passing of Hurricane Dorian in Freeport, Bahamas, Wednesday, Sept. 11, 2019. While power has returned to much of Grand Bahama, spokesman Carl Smith for the country's emergency management Agency said the electrical infrastructure around Marsh Harbour, Abaco's largest city, was destroyed.

It Takes a Community to be MORE THAN PINK

Kathy Kendrix and Susan G. Komen Oregon and SW Washington are walking together at the MORE THAN PINK Walk™

athy Kendrix is MORE THAN PINK® and she is using her experience as a talented business owner - or social-preneur, as she prefers to be called - to bring the community together to combat breast cancer.

Kathy's strong relationship with Komen started in the early 90s when she was a part of the National Black Lead-Initiative-Oreership gon Chapter (NBLIC), a sub-committee of the African American Health Coalition– just before Race for the Cure made its debut. Now, 26 years later, as the Race evolves into the MORE THAN PINK Walk™, Kathy is representing the Community Pillar, for her years of dedication to the cause and work she has put into spearheading one of Komen Oregon & SW Washington's special programs called Worship in Pink.

"Community is the hub for communication. Its where you turn to get your information; its always been that way," Kathy stated. "Churches make up [a portion] of the community. And Worship in Pink allows us to access that faithbased community, [foster] relationships, and get this important information - information about mammograms and breast health - out there."

The MORE THAN PINK Walk™ is an extension of the efforts Komen makes every day to connect the community back to the cause and understand the importance of the 4 pillars of their focused work: research, care, community, and action.

The community pillar signifies Komen Oregon and SW Washington's concentration on:

- Providing people with opportunities to share their passion for the movement and compassion for each other.
- Supporting survivors, forever fighters, and caregivers.
- Providing information and guidance to help navigate the care journey.

"IThe MORE THAN PINK Walk™] is more than a moment...It's a movement," Kathy confirmed.

Be a part of this movement with Kathy and Komen Oregon & SW Washington because without a community of support in the fight against breast cancer, progress would not be possible. It is with people like you that Komen Oregon & SW Washington can continue to fund the 4 pillars of work that have helped lead to:

- 35 new drugs being approved for treatment.
- 40% decline in breast cancer mortality.
- Over 3.5 million survivors in the U.S.

This is incredible progress; however, 42,000 people will lose their lives to breast cancer annually and we must invest in the breast cancer community to change this number. Komen's bold goal is to reduce breast cancer deaths by 50% in the US by 2026, and we know the power of community can make it happen!
