SneakerWeek is also about equity, providing opportunities for BIPOC creators to participate in an industry that has profited so much from the BIPOC community while hardly benefiting it on the retail side. In 2021, market research company Statista reported the $70 billion-a-year sneaker industry was projected to be worth $102 billion by 2025, yet only 5% of sneaker retailers were Black.

Now in its seventh year, the festival supplies impressive stats about its success: During its run, SneakerWeek has reinvested more than $250,000 into local businesses and has led to more than $750,000 in funding to support BIPOC entrepreneurs. Thirteen BIPOC and women-owned companies have launched during the festival.

“Herb and I were laughing that Portland has a week for everything,” Davis said of the origin of SneakerWeek. “Literally a week for pizza, a week for burgers, a week for chicken wings, I think there’s a slushie week now – and we were like, This is the footwear capital of the world! This is where so many brands are: your Nikes, your Adidas, your Under Armour, Columbia. So much innovation comes from Portland, but there’s no Sneaker Week! We thought, we can do this. Let’s just do this. And then we made it happen.”

“I think Portland offers creatives the environment to network, to collaborate and to build, to do things that you might not be able to see in other cities,” Beauclere said. “Opening your eyes to a whole new world that footwear and sneaker culture has to offer. It’s not just buying shoes, it’s being part of a whole community.”

Tickets to the K.I.C-Off Festival are $20 to 85 and are on sale through July 26. For more information and to purchase tickets, visit <https://www.sneakerweekpdx.com>.

Navy exonerates 256 Black sailors unjustly punished in 1944 after deadly port explosion

By TARA COPP, AP

The U.S. Navy has exonerated 256 Black sailors found to be unjustly punished in 1944 following a California port explosion that killed hundreds of service members and exposed racist double standards among the then-segregated ranks. At Port Chicago naval weapons station near San Francisco, 5,000 tons of munitions detonated, killing 320 personnel and injuring 390. Black sailors concerned for their safety refused to return to loading bombs without training on how to safely handle the munitions. The Navy punished them. Now, Navy Secretary Carlos Del Toro has signed paperwork saying the sailors were unjustly tried and convicted, clearing their names. Del Toro signed the paperwork Wednesday, the 80th anniversary of the disaster.
