NEW YORK, August 4.—A synopsis of Mrs. Tilton's testimony is published. It says Tilton cared little for his family, that he often left her entirely alone without coal or food or help, and was constantly telling her of his wrong-doings with other women. When Beecher began visiting their house, Tilton soon became jealous, and in the winter of 1869 began to accuse her of criminal interference with his family.

It is believed that in the crim. con. case which Tilton is to bring General Butler will act as counsel. NEW YORK, August 6.—Frank Moulton was before the Beecher Investigating Committee last night. It was stated that he would appear on Saturday night with documents.

MILWAUKEE, August 6.—In the Supreme Court at Madison yesterday, in the railroad case, the Court decided that it would hear the application for a preliminary injunction upon the unverified complaint of the Attorney General, and that objections raised by counsel for the railroad would be considered in determining whether the application should be granted. Counsel for the railroads then read affidavits setting forth the depreciation of gold bonds and preferred stock of companies since the passage of the Puller law.

NEW YORK, August 5.—A member of the Beecher Committee yesterday said the design of Moulton in withholding his testimony was to expose the stronger side when Beecher testified, and cut the throat of the weaker. It was doubtless Tilton's purpose to lock up part of the testimony for a reserve fund of future insinuation. The Committee unanimously decided that no report shall be made until Moulton's testimony was taken and the letters submitted. If the latter are not forthcoming, they will be obtained by legal process.

NEW YORK, August 5.—The excursionists accompanying Cyrus Field to Iceland to attend the Millennial celebration, reported July 29th, that they had arrived at Faro Islands, where they met the King of Denmark, and the whole party sailed for Iceland next day. CINCINNATI, August 5.—The steamer Pat Stogers, while near Aurora this morning, was burned with her entire cargo of cotton. The names of the lost as far as known, are: J. R. Stuart and Mrs. Smith, of Madison, Ind.; W. C. Brown, Cincinnati; Charles H. Dittman, pilot; Shirley Snyder and Jacob Light, of the crew. The boat was valued at $60,000; insurance, $35,000.

NEW YORK, August 5.—Moulton's second letter to Beecher reads: "My Dear Sir—In our acquaintance and friendship I have never received from you a letter of the tone of yours of August 4th. It seems unlike yourself and to have been inspired by the same ill advisers who so lamentably carried your private affairs before a committee of your church and thence before the public. In reply, let me remind you that during the whole of the past four years all the documents, notes and memoranda which you and Mr. Tilton have entrusted to me have been entrusted because they had a reference to your mutual differences. I hold no papers either of yours or his except such as bears on this case. You probably allude here to memoranda of your difficulties with Mr. Bower, but these have a direct reference to your present case with Mr. Tilton, and were deposited with me because of such reference.

and still is, to prevent the wish of one party being injuriously exercised against the other. You are incorrect in saying that Mr. Tilton has had access to my depository for materials. On the contrary I have refused such access. During the preparation of his sworn statement he came to me and said his work would be incomplete, unless I permitted him to use all the documents but I refused, and all he could rely upon were such notes as he had made from time to time from writings of yours which you had written to me to be read to him, and passages which he caught from my lips in short hand. Mr. Tilton has seen only a part of the papers in my possession, and would be more surprised to learn the entire facts of the case, than you can possibly be. What idle rumors may have existed in newspaper offices, I know not; but they have not come from me. In closing your letter you say: "I do not ask you to place before the committee any papers which Mr. Tilton may have given you, but I do demand that you place before the committee every paper which I have at least deposited with you." In reply I can only say I cannot place before the committee papers of one of the parties without doing the same with the papers of the other, and I cannot do dishonorably, except either by legal process compelling me or either by consent, in writing, not only of yourself, but of Mr. Tilton, with whom I shall confer on the subject as speedily as possible. You will, I trust, see a greater spirit of justice in this reply than you have infused into your usual letters of August 4th. Very respectfully, FRANCIS D. MOULTON.

He should gladly that desire according to the order in which they came to him, leaving the Committee and the public to make their own inferences. He had thus endeavored to maintain peace between Beecher and Tilton, and should continue to do so by a removal of misunderstandings and through an intelligent realization of self-interest. Judge Morris says that so far as Tilton is concerned, the case will be pressed for the earliest possible day.

CHICAGO, August 10.—A New York correspondent of the Tribune sends an account of an interview he had Saturday and Sunday night with Theodore Tilton. His article convinced that Tilton has foundation for all the statements he has made, and believes that Beecher is a serpent in the family of his parishioner. Tilton denied to him that there was a word of truth in the scandalous stories about his life. He published in the Golden Age, a biography of Woodhull, which was written by Col. Blood. He published it to keep her from giving to the world the story of his household shame. The correspondent also interviewed Judge Morris and obtained some letters that passed between Tilton and his wife prior to and after his discovery of the alleged improper relations between her and Beecher. They show the tender affection on his part, and deep resentment for her husband and contrition on her part. "Mr. Moulton," said Tilton, "was a reliable man, never having flinched or prattled during the investigation, while Beecher has misrepresented, betrayed and trampled Tilton in the mire.

The correspondent says Moulton's statement will show by Mrs. Tilton's own letters that she was not easily averse to being misled; that Beecher's apology was the work of Moulton, his attorney, on whom he relied and that it was signed by himself. Custer expects to reach Fort Lincoln by the 31st of August. The small parties of Indians met by the expedition generally fled. Six, one of their chiefs, was captured. The private dwelling of Christopher Joseph Cremer, acting editor of the Berlin Germania, was searched by the police, who confiscated letters, manuscripts and other pamphlets. The next visit of the police (seven in number) was to the home of Countess Van Kehler, Secretary of the Maximo Catholic Union, and their booty was considerable—about 20 documents, letters and circulars, with names of members of the Society. On the same evening Herr Van Kehler's workshop was searched, and again on the following morning. The plan of meeting of the German members of the Gesellschaft Union, and the house of Vice and spiritual counselor Muller, father of the Catholic societies in Berlin, were searched."
