THE NEWS FROM THE CHESTER MINES is very encouraging. All hands are taking out a ton of coal a day. The grant company's claim was sold to some Chinese for $2,500. The prospects are much better than during last year.

THE MARKETS.

Advance in Wheat.

Last week we gave reasons why we might expect a better price in Oregon wheat after harvest, without darning to encourage the hope that the rise would be great or immediate, but we have the great pleasure to announce to Oregon producers that the advance has already taken place, based on quotations from Liverpool. England needs more grain, by far than last year and there seems to be no country that has produced an abundant yield of cereals. The States of Oregon and Minnesota are the only ones at home we know of that yield as abundantly as last year in the United States, and as a consequence we shall be apt to realize good prices immediately.

The rise in Liverpool takes place just as the new crop is coming in. The quotations in San Francisco have advanced to $2 to $2 1/2 per cental, which is equal to $1 20 per bushel, this too, with the new crop just harvested and waiting for a market. Wheat is held at $1 68 per cental at Portland, or $1 per bushel, and Salem mills and other parties here are paying 90 cents since last Monday, with some receipts from the country.

This shows remarkably well for us and while the market is unsettled and prices fluctuating at present, still we need not doubt that the prosperity of Oregon producers for the coming year is assured. A large farmer informs us that contracts are offering to make advances on the wheat in the field at 90 cents per bushel, but of course farmers will prefer to hold on until waters take reliable shape, though some few who need money for harvest expenses may accept an advance at that figure.

It is a great pleasure to be able to congratulate our people on the abundant prosperity for the year to come.

Crop Prospects.

The hay harvest is in full progress, and new hay, principally wild oats, is being brought into market and sold for $8 per ton from wagons.

The wheat harvest will commence in earnest in many localities next week. The prospect for a bountiful yield is good for all wheat sowed early, and in some parts of the valley the spring grain promises abundant yield, but we are generally informed that the late harvest term has depreciated the prospect for a good return.

Dr. S. E. Jessup returned two days ago from a visit to Brownsville and tells us that as near as he can judge the late sowings of grain have to be a much injured by the heat. He says fields that looked well when he was up the river, were turned yellow and shrivelled when he returned a few days later. Other testimony speaks of damage done to wheat sowed late in April and in early May, while Mr. Rowwell Lamson, of Yamhill, informs us that in his region the late sowed grain looks splendid and promises well. We should venture the guess that one fifth of all the wheat may be more or less injured by the hot weather, averaging on that proportion of the crops a diminution of yield to the extent of one fourth less than would have been secured with one week's later rains.

SALEM MILLS.—This company now pays 90 cents for wheat, but the mills have shut down for three weeks to make preparations for another year's work, by which time wheat of the new crop will begin to arrive. Mr. Marshall J. Kinney, one of the brothers, is in Liverpool and is much pleased with his visit to the great wheat mart of the world. He has also been able to demonstrate the value to the company of his presence in that market, and they have already experienced such benefits that he will most likely remain there and furnish correct market reports to the firm here as well as make contracts for the sale of their products. He has a remarkable business capacity, which is decidedly a trait of the Kinney family.
