Clackamas County Council.

The Clackamas County Council meets on the fourth Friday of each mouth at 11 o'clock a. m. Place of meeting, at J. G. Trullinger's mill, near the center of the county.

Officers-N. W. Randall, President; A. Nichols, Vice President; W. W. H. Samson, Secretary, P.O., Needy John Ring, Treasurer; Frank Vat che, 1st Steward; N. H. Darnall, 2d Steward; Wm. Riggs, Gatekceper. Brethren in good standing are invited to meet with

By order of the Council. W. W. H. SAMSON, Soc'y.

During two months past the people of the United States have watched with intense interest the progress of the " crooked whiskey" trials at St. Louis, where, during several years past the revenue officers of the government, in conspiracy with the distillers of that city, have robbed the revenue of millions of dollars, while a similar condition of corruption and fraud has existed throughout the west. One by one these officials, and the distillers leagned with them, have been convicted and sentenced to suffer the penalties of the law. Under the efficient measures instituted by the Secretary of the Treasury, Bristow, justice seems to have found a voice and government seems to be in a measure purged of some of its corruptions, while conspirators in other sections are trembling with apprehension of the fate that is und subt edly in store for them also.

This week we hear of the trial and convic tion of Wm. McKee, a prominent journalist of St. Louis, a man of honorable standing and great influence, a prominent pollilcian, also, who was accused of aiding and abetting these frauds for political purposes- to raise means to be used in corrupting elections and securing partisan violories, as this system of conspiracy with distillers seems to have seen the means used to acquire a political preuption fund. We shall next hear of the trial of the private cretary of the President of the United States who is accused of abusing his official position and confidential relations in condition with hese same fraudh on the revenue, aiding the olans of the conspirators, and sharing their ilegal profits. We have no further remarks to nake upon these trials than to congratulate ur readers on the fact that justice does not leep, and that men guilty of such crimes an be thus prosecuted and convicted, a fact hat shows honest determination in high laces. We only hope that in the remaining resecutions no guilty accomplice shall esape and no innoceat man suffer harm.

The point to which we draw the attention of ur readers is this: The traffic in intoxicang liquors is the most abominable known nder the sun. It is the cause of untold evil, nd we would but recapitulate a more than vice told tale to show its enormity, which is tested by ruined homes, deserted families ad disgraced maxhood, and borne witness by crowded jails, prisons and pauper hous, and a criminal calender in every court a earth that swells to a grevious hurden the xes paid alike by rich and poor. And yet is cause of crime: this element of distress; is curse that blights wherever it touches, id so frequently destroys, is Reeased by ational statute and made a favorite means national revenue! Is there not seanething wrong in a system government that licenses and profits by evil is has not the courage to restrain? Is it not a sause for public and official demoralization-almost an excuse for it-when the highest national law establishes a parinership with a traffic that blights society and taxes the whole community? We de not, of course, excuse or palilate frauds thos comconscience, for the government is the creature of the sontiment of the people, and the only remedy is a higher public morality, pure principle, legisiztion born of a true christian civilization, and so capable of a "higher law" that, human legislation has hitherto enacted. It may be only in the future, but it will never be reached if we have no beacons to to direct our course.

Interesting Fact.

Mr. J. M. Raukin, of Polk county, informs us that he has made an interesting discovery while prospecting in the Coast mountains about fifteen miles from Dallas In one place, in a daep canyon, where a land, the fragments of an aerolite are imbed- tertaining and sometimes amusing, ded in the trunks. Philosophy explains that having just enough of politics to flavor, when a meteor, wandering through space, enters the atmosphere of the earth, the resistance and friction induce the heat that produces the light we see, and is also apt to cause the solid mass to burst into fragments. This has evidently been the case with the phenomenon witnessed by Mr. Raukin, but while these fragments usually fall with such force as to be deeply imbadded in the each, in this instance a number of them have struck against the bodies of large fir trees five or six feet in diameter, with such force as to bury themselves deep enough to remain in that position. He says some of the pieces are as large as a water bucket, or larger. Five trees have these fragments thus bedded; another has a deep scar on the side where one has grazed it, white a smaller tree, about 20 inches or two feet in diameter, has been struck with such force, by a sharp fragment, that it want through the trunk, splitting off one side of the tree, which hangs loose and dead, for about sixty feet. It would not be difficult from comparison of the dead and living parts to determine how long since the meteor fell. Rankin wants to make another trip to the same place with Mr. Condon, our State geologist, to have him gather the facts and make them useful. The stones are described as of dark color, very heavy, with very sharp and brittle appearing edges, and there is no reason to doubt their origin. Quite near to this same place Rankin informs us that he discovered a large double cave, the first room of which is almost as square as if made so to be inhabited, suggesting the idea that it had been made an upper room which is not so regular.

Letter from Lane County.

WILLAMETTE FORKS, Feb. 6, 1876. ED. FARMER: You may take the William otte valley over, or the world over, and you will find all grades of people, wise and foolgreat sections of land and do not know how to use it. If they are stock raisers they will others, over stock their land, as you can see if you look for yourselves, for the stock is much of it poor, feed scarce, no beef in country fit to est, the fault is that too many people do not know how to farm. They will go around the country in May and tell what a big crop they put in. They are going to get rich right off." But when it comes to thresh the grain it comes out rather slim-to their expectations and they say the season was not right. But I tell you they do not half put it in. They plow in the mud and sow in the mud, and they are a general bouch all around. Well! There is another class of people that are wiser than those. They have managed to have fine farms and fine houses: their land is drained; they put in as much as any body also and they frequently raise twice as much grain to the acre, compared to some of their neighbors. They ditch their land and do not work in the mud. For instance look at old -'s farm, near here. It is well drained and fixed fine. He bas got every thing that is needed for the Lords and Dukes of England, and if every man was in that condition there would be more prosperous and better people in the country than there is.

This a new country yet, and you could not expect ouch better work than has been done. There are but a few men who know how to work to best advantage, and we should thank God there are that many, or we could never expect to succeed. P. of H.

The writer of the foregoing forgot to put his name to it, and next time he must not fail to do so. When he quotes other people's names, he must give his own as security that he is reliable. As he did not, we omit names he gave ]

Varieties of Wheat.

LANE Co., Jan. 31st, 1876, ED. FARMER: In the last number of your valuable paper I gave to the farmers of Oregon my practical experience, as an agriculturist, on what depth to plow for wheat, and the size of plows to do it with. In this I will give them my long experience and observations of the best varieties of wheat to raise in Oregon and the quality of soil best adapted for each variety. This is best found out by close observation while growing, until ripe and thrashed.; for I really believe that no farmer can be a very successful one without he is a good observer, not of cereals alone, but of all the best kinds of machinery, wagons, plows, drills, cultivators, and seed sowers, and also of all the kinds of stock he raises on the farm.

The best variety of spring wheat I have observed, to raise in Oregon, is the white Chile club, and I consider it to be the finest spring wheat that has ever been raised in this State. It thrashes easier, yields as much or mora per acre, and makes better flour than any other variety grown. If drilled in which I consider the best method, use one bushel and three pecks per acre; if sowed broadcast, two bushels; but it should never be sown on wet or very damp land, as on such it will not fill as well as other varieties; but does much better on fern lands than any other, and in every instance should be sown on high dry land; and should if possible be sown or put in between New ish, men and women in it, people that own Years and the middle of March; later than that it does not fill as well as some

> The next best variety of spring wheat I would recommend to raise is called red chaff, known by the name of little club, this does not grow as tall as the Chile, neither is the grain as white and large, but weighs a little heavier to the bushel, makes good flour and yields well, and will fill better on low, damp ground than Chile, and if possible should be put in from the middle of February to the tenth of April. If drilled, one and a half bushels per acre; broadcast, one and three pecks. At the present these two varieties should be the only two raised on dry land, They yield more to the acre, and make better flour than any other spring wheat in Oregon.

> There is another variety called the Sonora; the chaff is red, but the grain is white; this is the best and only variety under my notice that will fill on wet land. I have raised it on low, wet land, side by side with the other varieties, where it would be well filled and the others would not have a single grain in the heads. It grinds more flinty, and does not make as good flour as the other two varieties; the straw is softer and falls down sooner when ripe. Drill a bushel and a half per acre. There are several other kinds of spring; wheat I could mention, that I have tried, sent from Washington, but they will not do in Oregon as well as those above mentioned.

At present there are only three varie-MR. EDITOR: The WILLAMETTE ties of winter wheat in Oregon, under FARMER, never without that variety my notice, that are worth raising. The

The annual Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue of Gregory, the well-known seedsman of Marblohead, Mass., is advertised in our columns. We can endorse Mr. Gregory as both honest and reliable. A narrow passage leads to bs appreciated by market gardeners, and by all others who want to have their seed both fresh and true.

This variety will do well put in from the middle of October to the middle of

The second variety is the white velvet, and at the present time is the finest weeat in Oregon. The writer took the first premium with this at the last State Fair. It is the largest white wheat in Oregon, makes splendid flour but does not yield so well to the acre as common. This variety should be drilled in from the first of October to the first of December.

acre, broadcast and with the drill one bushel and three pecks. Now, Mr. Editor, as no one has ever written in your paper on the subject of raising wheat, and it being the main thing for export, and at present is bringing more money or wealth into Oregon than all other productions to-gether, I thought the subject a good one, and one that would interest some of the farmers of Oregon and might be the means of adding a few dollars in their pockets in the future, aud if so, I their pockets in the future, and if so, I should be highly pleased and well paid.
