

TEMPERANCE.

MOHAWK, OR., June 23, 1877.

ED. FARMER: The cause of temperance is worthy of the notice of every man and woman in the land. It is a work in which young and old may engage to benefit those that have fallen into the tempter's snare.

is only two hundred and fifty millions controlled by these companies, this would give one hundred and twenty-five thousand a capital of two thousand dollars each.

Ohio Correspondence.

MESSRS. EDITORS: I read with much fine feeling to myself the controversy which prevails amongst your lady contributors on that much aggravated question—the rights of women.

I notice the evidences of rapid development by way of introducing fine stock and a strict adherence to the principles of honest industry.

May lingers frigidly, and frost nearly every night has awakened serious apprehensions with regard to the wheat crop, which never looked so promising before.

Yesterday asked a farmer why he was so late in planting his Early Rose potatoes? He said he planted in the moon (meaning the sign).

Life Insurance.

AUMSVILLE, June 26, 1877.

ED. FARMER: The following views of different people on life insurance, taken from "Fifty Centuries of National Existence," may be interesting and instructive to your readers.

Mr. Jones, a broker, being of a speculative mind, thought best to provide for his family in the event of sudden death, by insuring his life for their benefit, in the sum of fifty thousand dollars.

Shan't and Won't. Shan't and Won't were two little brothers, Angry and sulky and gruff; Try and Will are dear little sisters, One scarcely can love them enough.

An indiscreet person is like an unpeeled lemon, which every one may read; but which no one would touch.

MATCHED, BUT NOT MATED.

(From the Daily Record.)

A late steamer brought up from San Francisco a newly married couple fresh from the States. A middle-aged farmer, or settler of Washington Territory went east after a wife.

She was a nice looking girl of eighteen and he was a plodding, unimpressive sort of a man who had reached his forty years of age.

When they reached San Francisco they secured passage on the steamer and made their bridal couch in the steerage.

The prudent fellow didn't want to waste his means in luxurious travel, and that honeymoon in the steerage didn't win the girl's heart by any means.
