WILLAMETTE FARMER

To Patrons of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho.

EAR BRETHREN: In a few days I expect to et East to attend the meeting of the National ange, and propose to be absent from the aviadiction about ten weeks. Questions of taw or usage arising during my absence may lereferred to my deputies in the different muntion or, in case there is no deputy in the com-Douglas contat. Dreput.

H

I beg to call the attention of all members of upon Patrons to give it a hearty and united support. Brethren, we need a paper devoted to the interests of the farmer. It should at once furnish us an account of the current events of importance, the state of the craps, markets, &c., give us a medium through which to exchange our ideas and experiences, and furnish our families a weekly repast of such pure and wholesome miscellaneous literature as ing are not bounded by an acre and do is best suited to their wants. Such a paper re. not expire in one application. On the quires a large outlay of means, labor, and contrary, they are developed by use talent, and cannot be furnished us without and grow by repetition. They spread adequate support. Let me urge you, therefore, and multiply from farm to farm and to give our own paper a cordial support; sub- from year to year, until a continent is scribe for it, write for it, work for it, so that made richer by them and posterity we may have a farmer's paper worthy of the hails them as a treasure. name and second to none.

Let not the tillers of the soil, therefore, blindly imagine that physical development alone is sufficient to secure maximum crops and a margin of profit. Let them bear in mind that a still higher power has its seat in the brain, from which physical development derives all its value; that the silent energy of thought is quietly doing its work over the continent, from week to week and from year to year, and that this free, earnest and unselfish thought, while continually achieving all.

Thus it is that while we discover on one hand a grand army of thoughtful workers every where intent on developing new and original facts and new fruits of experience, we may also find in the background of the picture another army of workers, who are also thinkers of the highest type-a countless army of vigorous and enterprising journals, always ready and eager to selze and appropriate, to expound and improve, these new and valuable results of practical farming, and then to scatter them broadcast through the land to shed light in dark places and pour new fertility into sterile soils.

So cearly and palpably have the journals of this class demonstrated their value that it is often possible in passing through a rural district, to discover by no unmistakable signs, the farms at which such papers are taken and where they have found a welcome home, and it is easy to see that in the presence of these sheets of useful knowledge, the whole aspect of the farm is changed and all the results improved. Manures and fertilizers are more efficient, as well as more abundant, the latest and best methods are adopted, a new impulse is given to vegetation, the very roots of the crop!
