

By Telegraph.

Afghan Matters in Parliament.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—In the house of commons, Northcote agreed to postpone the report on the war until Monday, when it will be first subject to discussion. Willmott's resolution will be voted on by the members of the House. It is understood that the bill will be introduced on the 1st of January.

The dispute, however, is not yet decided, as the government has not yet received its answer to the proposal of will be made to the British and Indian Regiments serving in Afghanistan, could only be had, had the personal opinion of the viceroy as to the probable result of the user's policy. There was no ground for supposing that it referred to any direct or formal proposal.

Eastern Matters.

Austria has consented to make a convention relative to Novi Bazar applicable to Bosnia. The porto, however, declines the Austrian demand to make eventual evacuation dependent on Turkey's paying the cost of occupation. Layard, British ambassador, has received information contradicting reports of a massacre in Melnik district.

The British Victory.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—A Lahore correspondent says that Gen. Roberts will probably enter on the heights east of Peshawar, pass his victory detachments 30,000 men to the south from the ameer's authority, according to private information these tribes are already sending levies into the field camp. It is reported that Edward VII's tribes are only kept from deserting Layar by the presence of troops. Two of Peshawar were seen among the detachments at Peshawar. An Afghan general has presented at Peshawar.

Concord, A Liberal Town.

Viceroy, Kharidin, Dec. 7.—The new grand proclamations that Pasha has drafted a law Kharidin, re, ministerial responsibility, the Armenian people to the congratulations of Ottoman subjects, declared that to all administered impartial justice would be posts would be filled and all government religion. In conclusion, "our reverence to pray to the same God we said, 'We all in churches."

Another Answer Report.

LAHORE, Dec. 7.—A letter which a copy of India received on the 2d in which announced that Major Cavagnari had resigned from the Siens Ali, his answer to the viceroy's ultimatum. It concludes with the declaration that he entertains no enmity toward the British government, that he desires to resume former friendly relations, and will not resist a visit of a British mission to Cabul.

Turkish Policy.

It is stated that Muhammad Damad Pasha has been appointed grand master of artillery. The sultan has declared that the appointment of Carathéodori Pasha as minister of foreign affairs, implies the intention of carrying out the treaty of Berlin, and that the new ministry was formed to satisfy Europe and to attempt an internal reorganization.

A Victory but not a Triumph.

VIENNA, Dec. 8.—The proposed motion in the Austria delegation at Peshawar for a vote of confidence in Count Andrasz's ministry, has been quietly dropped. Count Andrasz's victory is confined to the rejection of the report of the budget committee.

Another Ministerial Change.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—A telegram from St. Petersburg states that Gen. Temeschoff, minister of the interior, has resigned, and the appointment of Count Schouvaloff as his successor is considered probable.

PACIFIC COAST.

CALIFORNIA.

The Constitutional Convention on the Texas Pacific Bill.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—The constitutional convention tabled a resolution requesting California senators and representatives to support Congressmen Stephens' bill granting a subsidy to the Texas Pacific.

A Chinaman Hanged.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—A Bodie dispatch says that Chou Yow, a Chinaman, was hanged at Bridgeport to-day for the murder of Ah Pow in Benton county last May.

The Sacramento Trots.

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6.—The weather was threatening this morning, but the afternoon proved clear and pleasant and the attendance at the park was good. The half mile running race between Sam Brannan, Winters' filly, Bob Lingersoll and Champion was won by the former in two straight heats in 52 and 53.

The trotting race for the 2:26 pace was postponed until to-morrow, when also Burns and Sweetser will contest for a purse of one thousand dollars. The track is in fine condition.

EASTERN.

Proposed Army Reorganization.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Referring to a dispatch concerning the joint congressional committee on army reorganization, the following additional statements can be made on very reliable authority: The majority of the committee some time ago agreed to recommend as the main features of their report that the total number of rank and file of the army be limited to 22,000 men, and that a system of interchange of ability of line and staff officers be submitted for the present system of regular staff departments, excepting the engineer department. These features were agreed to, though with some hesitation, by Senator Burnside and Representatives White and Strait, three of the four Republican members of the joint committee. Senator Paine, the last Republican member, did not attend any of the meetings until yesterday. Meanwhile many other Republicans and representatives receiving private information of these unexpected concessions made by Burnside, White and Strait to the demands of their Democratic colleagues on the committee had begun to protest very strongly and reinforced this pressure with the emphatic declaration that no such extremely radical measure should become a law if strenuous opposition could prevent it. Senator Plumb, at the meeting to-day, took similar stand, and Messrs. Burnside, Wright and Strait are understood to have expressed an intention to draw their previous assent to several important provisions of the above indicated sweeping character. Thus the whole subject was reopened. An unanimous decision ensued. The result cannot at present be ascertained, but it seems to be certain that no final agreement was reached to-day, and that nothing positive will be known concerning the forthcoming bill until it is presented to congress. There is said to be considerable probability, however, that the majority of the committee will agree to a compromise on a total of twenty-two or twenty-three thousand men for the rank and file of the army, and that material modifications will be made in the provisions concerning the staff corps so as to provide, among other things, that no vacancies shall be created in them except by death or by court-martial convictions of military offenses. It should be understood, mittee will not, by any means, necessarily insure the enactment of their bill. It is now believed by most well informed persons in Washington that a majority of the house of representatives, including the Texas, Colorado, Nebraska and Pacific coast members, will not consent to any reduction of the army below its present maximum of 23,000 men, and in view of this, it is likely that an amendment to the bill will be introduced to the effect that the bill will not be sent to the Senate unless it is agreed to by a majority of the house.

The proposed bill, however, is not yet presented to the president, who is negotiating with the powers that be to have the bill signed. It is not known whether the president will accept the bill as it stands, or will propose changes. At any rate, the bill will be sent to the Senate, and the president will be compelled to sign it.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.

The new administration is likely to be more lenient than the present, and it is possible that the president will accept the bill as it stands.