Portland, Friday, Nov. 28, 1879.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

A GRANGERS' COMMENTS.

Editor Willamette Farmer: Being a regular reader of the FARMER I noticed, and was very favorably impressed with the article...

The writer is evidently a thoughtful and intelligent man, and in the consideration of his subject he makes numerous suggestions quite appropos to the question, and also tells some truth, particularly when he says...

The author of "No 4" can not expect to build up many more successful grange business organizations unless he first instills into the breast of my fellow farmers the necessity of meeting their word as being as good as their bond...

The main roads here are all tarripped at great expense to settlers. Brother M. has already spent sixteen hundred dollars to build roads through his farm...

and left an unincumbered field to the middlemen. To the gentlemen who so quietly came forward and without the remotest chance for self profit, pledged their faith and paid their money...

This I submit should be paid by the stockholders, and paid liberally, as men of honor—men who understand the laws of right, should pay...

The objects of the Co. were set out so that "they who ran could read"; they were printed in circular letters; they were open to the inspection of every subscriber...

Gentlemen, farmers, men of honor, why will you sully your credit, disgrace your honor, desert your companions of the Grange in adversity...

The author of "No 4" can not expect to build up many more successful grange business organizations unless he first instills into the breast of my fellow farmers the necessity of meeting their word as being as good as their bond...

If you will allow me space in another issue I will write again and state why this enterprise was not—as it might, could and should have been—a grand success.

I sign myself, I hope, AN HONEST FARMER.

NOTES OF TRIP TO NATIONAL GRANGE.

BY MRS. C. E. SHIPLEY.

The main roads here are all tarripped at great expense to settlers. Brother M. has already spent sixteen hundred dollars to build roads through his farm...

It was then in a shape to buy machinery, to contract and be contracted with. To conduct operations only one thing remained i. e., the grand power that makes the world go round...

The contract for machinery, every contract made by the company, were made in the name of the company. The only contracts that were by any possible construction private were those promissory notes which raised money to float the company...

The stock books upon which they had relied were unproductive. The low price at which the machinery was sold to the farmers left no possibility for profits, and the "N. W. S. S. and

We visited their beautiful cemetery, and a beautiful artificial lake and park near the town. Visited the University and drank from the sulphur spring in the grounds, also went through their extensive museum...

There is a beautiful rural town, and here we first noticed union lawns, in fact fences are not at all fashionable here. Their lawns extend to the street, and there is nothing to indicate where one's possessions begin or end...

They look but little older than when they left Oregon, and expressed a hope that they should return some time as they like this country best. We visited a sister in Mt. Vernon, Knox county, and here we saw the finest scenery in Ohio...
