PORTLAND, OREGON, DEC. 19, 1879.

NO. 44.

OUR LAST DAY.

It is with much regret that we announce the fact that we have received very much from other sources, our press is now at a standstill. The proprietors of the Oregon Farmer have lost the interest of their Oregon. Our motto is, as always been, "to make as good a paper as we can for the money," and let that same spirit as we say, we can possibly fulfill. The only thing any business is done to be, and the Willamette Farmer now that the general public the Farmer's a growing, in its general character, a contribution and influence within us in all its rights, and we respectfully invite the people of the most general-of this plan. The Farmer's aim, in the interests of the public, and that shall proceed to make us to all who have been and are now subscribers.
