The Benders Again.

OMARA, Aug. 4.-Mr. Stewart, a railroad miractor, of Blaire, went to see old man contractor, of Blaire, west to see oid man Bonder to-day at Fremont, and on seeing him he said, "That's old Bonder." Stewart saw old Bender before the family left the place in Kansas and knew him well. He has no doubts that the prisoner is Bonder. They did not speak to Bender about Stewart as it gets him so excited to mention Kansas or the name of Bender to him. Crowds have b en to see both the old man and old woman to-day, and he a very excitable, remaining cross and nervous two or three hours after conversing about Kansas. He frequently asks for a knife and persists that he will not be taken to Kansas dive.

A Greenbacker Wants Greenbacks. Waantscrox, Aug. 4.—General Weaver, Presidential nominee of the Greenback Labor party, has issue 1 a circular to members of the party, appealing for contributions of $1 and upwards to aid in defraying the expenses of the campaign from now until November.

Buffalo was incomparably the largest ever known in July; and the movement of cotton, considering the lateness of the sensor, was re-markably large in manufactories; also a very heavy business was done, and the interrup-tions were few, and the demand for the pro-ducts seemed to tread closely on the heels of the supply in nearly all important branches. An encouraging revival in the iron business was noticed though it was due mainly to the extraordinary demand of builders of new rail-roads in every part of the country. The local and retail trade was unusually active, also with-out any dangerous upward rush in prices. July is usually one of the months in which transactions are smallest. In 1860 as in 1879, all ordinary rules appear to be diare-garded in the resistless forward movement of commerce and industry. # Stocking Small Streams With Fish.

If you have a cool running stream on your arm you can easily stock it with trout and in one or two years you will be able to take a mess for years when trout are in season. If the water be too warm for trout put in perch and they will thrive readily. Lastly, if the stream is full of mud-holes put in cels. In a word make that stream pay you four or five times what the ground it occupies would. An agricultural engineer makes the following estimate of the value of a pond for fish and how to conduct it: The bottom of a fish pond should be uneven; deep holes here and there are desirable; and to make these the earth for the dam should be taken from the bottom of the pond and should be dug out unevenly, leaving pits here and there in which the fish may hide and retire for warmth in the Winter and coolness in the Summer. A few large stones should also be gathered from the farm and scattered over the ground to be overflowed, or heaps of small stones may be made here and there. A few stout stakes with large spikes or hooks in them, to prevent unbidder notting, should be driven in the bottom These provide rabbing places for the fish, also shelter for small fry; and a good supply of old stumps scattered about will encourage aquatic insects to gather and breed, and these will furnish food. An estimate of the value of half an acre of pond surface may be made as follows: Ten pounds weight of fish may

New Reaper and Binder

A correspondent of the Country Gentlema

I saw tried to-day a new kind of binder at tached to a reaper. The novelty consists in the sheaf being bound with a straw hand-That part of the work is done well, and the whole machine may be considered a success, though a few unimportant changes in some other respects were suggested by the first trial. A description that would be intelligible to the general reader is impossible, even it given by the inventor himself; and I will only say that the straw is raked into a sheaf at the end of the board next to the machine, where it is soized in iron arms, and held while a straw band is passed around it until the two ends of the band pass each other and are twisted. The_twisted ends are then tucked under, and the sheaf is dropped out of the mahine on the opposite side from where it en tered, looking precisely like a hand bound sheaf.

The straw band is not picked out of the sheaf, as in hard work, but from a supply that is deposited in a suitable receptacle, which has the advantage of always allowing a election of straw that is long enough and tough enough to meet the requirements of the case. Of course no band is double length, nor is there any necessity for it when straw of case. Of course no band is double length, a is there any necessity for it when straw sufficient length can always be selected.
