During the week there have been four arrivals of wheat ships, but they had cargoes all ready and we do not even hear the ques tion of tonnage raised. The price of freight to Liverped is not even to be talked of.

During the week various small lots of wheat has changed hands, but no doubt the aggregate has been enough to keep exporters well supplied for all present needs.

Mr. Moore of Walla Walla has made a con 2,000 tons of Walla Walla wheat direct to 1,500 tone more of wheat at Astoria, left over from last year and unsold.

The price list remains unchanged from last week, except that apples are nearly out of on, and as a consequence good fruit bears a better price.

CALIFORNIA MARKETS.

Barley-Dull and nominal.

We take the following from the San Francisco Commercial Herald of April 1. Freights and Charters. At this writing there is only one disengaged vessel in port, and for a direct one disengaged vessel in port, and for a direct port in the United kingdom 77s 6d would readily be paid, through 80s@82s 7d is de-manded. The freight market exhibits con-tinued strength, not only for vessels near at hand, but for those afar off. The tonnage on route to arrive in six months seems to be augmenting rapidly, now reaching some 222,000 tons register, against 115,000 at even date last year, and 110,000 in 1879. A goodly number of this fleet have already secured charters to arrive far into November, and charters to arrive far into November, and for this service 70s is asked and 62s 6d offered for November loading. We are told that many ships for wheat loading of the new crop have been secured at 60s@62s 6d@65s, according to time and place of arrival and dispatch. These high freights are drawing ships here from all waters for the carriage of the new crop, accounts of which are somewhat conflicting. Overflowed lands are not sown to wheat this year, but where this is the case hill lands and counts of which are somewhat conflicting. Overflowed lands are not sown to wheat this year, but where this is the case hill lands and virgin soil have been utilized to an extent to equal the acreage of past seasons. With a good favorable season we have no reason to expect any shortage of cereal crop this year. The Sacramento Bee thus reviews the condition of the State:

The rains of Winter and early Spring have been copious, and the result is to be seen on every hillside and in every valley, on the green carpet that adorns Nature everywhere, in the vigor of the grain and on the bloom of the trees. Feed for stock promises to be most abundant, and the outlook for a large harvest is good. The almond bloom in this vicinity has been quite severely nipped by the frost, and other trees have been injured, but—with the exception of young oranges—not much, as otherwise they were overleaded with bloom. Some grape shoots, too, have been nipped, but the bloom was not out enough for it to have been scriously hurt. Notwithstanding these drawbacks, the fruit crop generally throughput the country promises to be the best we have ever had. In central and Northern California the farmers are following with their plaws in the wake of the receding waters, and while, of course, the crop will Northern California the farmers are following with their plaws in the wake of the receding waters, and while, of course, the crop will not be what it would have been had there been no overflow, still the prospects are more than fair, especially as regards corn, potatoes, and vegetables in general. 2 future crop prospects are at present discourag-ing, and make farmers all the stronger holders ing, and make farmers all the stronger holders of their corn stocks. These, from the weekly deliveries, are but meagre, and as foreign supplies only come in sufficient for immediate use when added to granary stores, the markets of the past few days having continued the previous week's upward tendency of value. Business does not follow fast the rise in prices Business does not follow has the rise in prices still it keeps close to them, and pauses taken to review each advance do not weaken the position. Of the quantity of wheat afloat, the immense proportion of two-thirds is from Cal-ifornia; and as that will only arrive irregular-ly, it adoption is not likely to be difficult; par-ticularly as a continental demand is sure to sake of score of the freights. The countil take off some of the freights. The quantity coming from India, Chilb, Australia and Rusman who has not a vessel to depend on to freight it cannot well afford to buy wheat at any price, though it is said a large quantity of wheat can be sold at $1.30 per cental, because the markets abroad is generally better, and the same quality of wheat is worth $1.45 in San Francisco. As long as tonnage supply is so scant, those who have ships will have their own way pretty much, and cannot be forced to purchase more wheat than they need to keep well ahead of their own needs. Competition is about ended, and there is no improvement likely in the near future.

During the week there have been four arsowing approached more nearly to an average soming from India, Chilli, Australia and Russia, is much more than on passage from Atlantic ports, and there is not any likelihood of our ports of call being crowded. Of course time and genial weather may greatly improve trop prospects, but improvement of prospect is quite a different affair to improvement of a tual deliveries. The character of the winter has been such that an abundant and early supply of vegetables is now impossible, so that only of the strongest Spring influences to depress the flour market need not be expected. The outlook abroad shows a change of weather in France from frost to a damp and high temperature. The Winter wheat has suffered less damage from India, Chilli, Australia and Russia, is much more than on plassage from Atlantic ports, and there is not any likelihood of our ports of call being crowded. Of course time and genial weather may greatly improve trop prospects, but improvement of a study device and genial weather may greatly improve trop prospects, but improvement of a study developed to improvement of a study developed to the character of the winter has been such that an abundant and early supply of vegetables is now improvement of a study developed to purchase their outlet, and there is no developed to purchase the character of the winter has been such that an abundant and early supply of vegetables is now improvement of a study developed t sowing approached more nearly to an ave than they did on this side of the channel. NEW YORK HOP MARKET.

The Commercial Bulletin, March 23, says: Early in the week there was quite a lively trade with brewers and a fair volume of business between dealers. Some goods that could be classed as choice simply on their own merits brought 24c cash, while over 200 bales tract with the O. R. & N. Co. to transport of what could not be graded higher than prime realized 22@23c cash. Mediums went to a San Francisco on their steamers, 1,000 tons of fair extent at 18@20c, but at lower than those which goes by the Columbia. Mr. Moore has prices only an inferior article was secured. At the present time there seems to be a pause in the demand, not, however, due so much to lessened requirements as to the fact that buyers are unusually cautious in their move-ments and apprehensive that the situation may not in point of fact be what the surface indications would tend to show. Owing to may not in point of fact be what the surface indications would tend to show. Owing to this fact, business has been quieter here the past two or three days, but it cannot be said that the market is otherwise than fairly strong, with the advantages favorable to a further rise on all but trashy stock. Letters from some of the country markets speak of increased buying there, mostly on home account and also mention more looking around on the part of shippers agents. In one section 22½c was paid for a second quality article, while 23c has been bid and refused in several instances for someting that might be considered strictly choice. In the local market the latter quality might be had at 24c, but only to a moderate extent. Nothing in the way of a good brewing quality, can be secured at less than 226c 23c, while a lower price than 20c will bring nothing short of a very inferior article. The latest mail reports from England contain nothing materially different from those of a week ago, and we fail to learn of any subsequent change amounced by telegraph.

THE MEN IN MASKS.

Pall Details of the Allaworth Tragedy as Given by an Ere Witness. A Deserved Doom.

On the night of the 25th, says the Walla Walla Statesman, there was a crowd in Hill's saloon, talking and smoking, when a woman passed out of a side door into the street, whereupon some one remarked: "They're going to smoke opium, let's go and see them." At this the crowd started for the opium den; on arriving they proceeded up stairs and found two men and three women smoking opium. After viewing the disgusting scene for awhile, the crowd started to leave, when one of the fiends spoke up and said: "You've got a great deal of gall." Whereupon one of the outsiders, named Dave Correll, said: "Yes; more gall than anybody," started after the fiend, gave him

By this time quite a crowd had congregated and they all started for the new "joint." On arriving at the designated spot they found a tent in which Julia Wilson, Lotta Kelly and Charley Dunn were smoking. Several of the parties started in to take the pipes, when Dunn said: "Don't come in." No attention was paid to his remarks, and the pipes were taken. Dunn said they were no gentle men as he had nothing to defend him-self with, and if he had a pistol he could STAND THEM OFF For awhile, with that Dave Correll socked a pistol, stuck it in Dunn's face and said "take it." Dunn didn't take the pistol and Correll slapped him over.

The crowd then went back to town and talked the matter over, when they again went for the first opium den. There they found one "Frenchy" and "Black Dick" and two women. After stopping the correct of the control of the there a few moments they left, the crowd then dispersed and went to bed. During the next day the opium fiends congregated in the different saloons drinking and talking of what had occurred the preceeding night. Between 4 and 5 P. M. I (Jas. Mackinson), was partly lying on a table in Hill's saloon talking to John Elliott, when I saw "Black Dick" break into a door leading to a room occupied by a prostitute. A minute or so afterward he passed out. Hearing a shuffling sound I looked around and saw "Black Dick" holding a knife in the air, and I sang out

"LOOK OUT FOR THE KNIFE LON!" Dick then gave him fourquick lunges, and Lon said: "Jimmy, he's killed me; I'm stabbed." I then, in company with George, helped him to the doorway. then ran for assistance. Soon came back with Mr. Moody, and we three started in pursuit of Dick, who was making for the back of town. When he saw we were after him he turned and slowly walked towards us. Mooiy and Creaser caught him by the arms, and started to bring him back. Dick then said to Creaser: "I've got it in for you and

KILL YOU BEFORE I DIE."

He was brought to where the affray occurred, when Bi'l Tillard interfered. ordered us to turn him loose. A tussl then occurred between Moody and "Black Dick," Moody getting much the best of the fight. At this juncture Hank Vaughn jumped into the crowd and took "Black Dick" away, locking him up in a back room of Vincent's saloon. He was turned over to justice of the peace for safe keeping. A constable then took him in charge, binding him hand and foot, locked him in a Dick was then asked if he was sorry for what he had done when he replied: "No, but he was sorry that he HAD NOT GOT ANOTHER." Babb, in reply to a question said: Boys give 'Black Dick' a fair and square trial; don't use violence." He maintained consciousness to the last, but suffered s great deal. About 3:20 A. M., in the neighborhood of 100 masked men pened the door of the room where Black Dick" was confined, and covering the guard with pistols, a demand was made for the prisoner. Everything was done quietly, and on the prisoner being surrendered he was taken about fifty feet off where a high fence frame had been erected and preparations made to hang him. Dick asked for time to say his prayers, which was granted, he also requested some one to write a letter to HIS MOTHER

In Canada, which was promised him. He was then strung up to a cross beam and died of strangulation, his feet being only three inches from the ground. The crowd then looked for Tillard and Dunn but these lad eggs, had fortunately for themselves sailed down the mighty Oregon for more congenial climes. next day quiet again reigned supreme in Ainsworth, no questions being asked or answers given to curious fact hunters. Everyone from high dignitary to low vassal fully sympathized with the action of the men in masks.
