Atkinson, who is an enthusiastic admirer of Eastern Washington and a firm believer in its agricultural wealth, wants the railroad companies to test the soil at different points. He thinks the N. P. R. R. would find it profitable to plow, fence, plant or sow and cultivate one or five acres at the Wallula junction, at Ainsworth, at the eight mile well, at the twenty-one mile well, at twin wells, at Riverville and at every other station on the road, and if the same be done on all other lines and roads the testimony will become convincing and cumulative for the whole upper country. Judging from the past, it would assure the making of more than a thousand productive farms within a few years, where now only bunch grass and sage brush have away. The samples of grain and vegetables to be sent at the N. P. R. R. are proof of the power of the Wallula regions for prolific growth.—Walla Walla Times. THE FERN GLEN. Captain Babb of the Ill-Fated Ship Tells the Sad Story. The British bark Fern Glen which went ashore on Clatsop spit last Sunday morning is a total wreck. From Captain Johnson, of the Columbia, the Astoria gets the following particulars: He got to the scene of the wreck at day break, and after standing by till 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon he got the crew on board and came up to this place, meeting the Canby with a volunteer crew on board which was going down to rescue them. Yesterday morning the vessel keeled over and the crew took to the only boat they had left, a small affair leaking so badly that it took four men to bail her out. The tide was carrying them over to Sand Island when Captain Johnson got them on board. The following is Captain Babb's account: "We sailed from London for Wellington with passengers on the 1st of May. Made a very good passage and left Wellington on the 22d of August. Arrived off the bar a 4 o'clock last Sunday morning; made Hancock light and was puzzled; saw a red light and expected to see a red and white flash; took bearings and thought I was in good position, being sufficiently far to windward, then wore so as to stand off till daylight, when I could make the bar and pick up a pilot. About 6 o'clock found the ship striking and a very strong tide of which I was not aware setting us in. About 3 p. m. the lifeboat came alongside, and the Captain said he thought there was no danger; that she would probably drive over the sands, so I determined to stand by the ship. The vessel lay tolerably easy all Sunday night, but on Monday I found that she had worked astern; I got the steam winch ready and heaved out the ballast. About 4 o'clock commenced leaking and I then made preparations to leave. At 7 o'clock, a strong wind blowing from the southeast and the ship striking heavier, let go both anchors. She jumped heavily all night; I got out starboard life boat, but could do nothing; she drove almost immediately at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning the ballast shifted, the vessel laid over on her beam ends, with her masts in the water. All hands clung to the ship's side; I saw the life boat trying to get to us, but the sea ran so high it was impossible. About 10 o'clock she began to break amidstips, and at noon, seeing no other chance, and finding we must make some effort, we launched the only boat we had left and after great effort were taken on board by the Columbia." The crew, some 20 in number, saved nothing, and were fortunate in escaping with their lives, for it was a rough day outside. The vessel, which now lies southwest of Fort Stevens, is fast breaking up. She was owned by Perret & Co., of Sunderland. Upon the arrival of the crew everything possible was done to relieve their immediate wants. They will probably get berths on other vessels here and at Portland. JUVENILE ELOPEMENT. Two Little Kittitas Girls Run Away with two Men, but are Overtaken and a Legal War Begun. On Thursday morning, says the Yakima Record, the citizens of the quiet locality of the West Side, Kittitas Valley, were aroused by the report that two young girls, aged respectively 12 and 14, had been abducted or eloped, the latter most probable, as subsequent developments indicate. For the sake of the future reputation of the girls and their connection we refrain from giving names. We shall therefore only give the matter as we heard it, refraining from citation, and let the courts, before which it now is, decide the matter. The particulars, as near as we can learn, of this elopement are as follows: It seems that two young men, who are old enough to know better, especially where the girls are so young, induced them to elope and on Wednesday night they started from the valley, intending to go to Oregon to be married. From some letters left by the girls the step father knew where they were going. Getting on his horse he started for Ellensburg. There he found Constable Perry, and both started for the children. Arriving here, a warrant was sworn out before Justice Brooks, charging the young men with abduction. Presbytery with John Lyon, his deputy, and the step-father then started for the Lower Yakima country, the party they were pursuing having passed through town Thursday afternoon. They traced the fugitives down the river, and late that night found them camped about 14 miles below town. The officers experienced some difficulty in making arrests, but the step-father gave them the greatest trouble and they were compelled to disarm him to keep him from shooting the youngster. Taking the children all to charge, the officers then returned to town. The girls were taken to the hotel and put to bed, and the others hunted "chair lodgings" till morning. On Friday morning, and while at the hotel, the step-father hit one of the boys a terrible welt over the head. For this he was placed under arrest. In his case an examination was had Friday afternoon, but the early hour we go to press prevents a report. In the case of the young men an examination will be held on Saturday. FATAL SHOOTING AFFRAY. Fred Gere Fatally Shoots another Minstrel in the Theatre at Walla Walla. A shooting affray occurred about 9 o'clock on Monday evening in a dressing room of the Adelphi Theatre at Walla Walla, in which Fred Gere shot another minstrel named James Kelly, the ball entering the left breast just below the nipple. It seems the parties quarreled on the stage during the first act, and the trouble was renewed in the dressing room with the above result. Gere was arrested and lodged in the county jail. He is well known in this city, having at one time been connected with Baugh's photograph gallery. He belongs to a wealthy and respectable family of Campagna county, Ill., a brother of his being a prominent lawyer there. Kelly's wound is pronounced mortal. ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—A man calling himself James Donley, a passenger on the down train from Walla Walla, as the train stopped at Celilo, says the Wasco Sun, stepped off and attempted to take his own life last Wednesday by shooting himself with a pistol. He wounded himself in the shoulder pretty badly, but not so as to endanger his life. He was taken down to this place on a freight train and packed to the Unadilla House, where Drs. Logan and Richardson were called to attend him. While being conveyed to this place he tried repeatedly to get his pistol so as to finish the job. He was closely watched, however, and all attempts of the kind prevented. He was under the influence of alcohol, caused by excessive drinking. He is now doing well and being somewhat recovered to his senses, and seems to meditate no further attempt on his life.
