Mr. Charles Warren of this city met with a rather perilous adventure a short time since in the wilderness of Tillamook county. He left the surveying party of S. Caudle, some distance out in the woods, and started for the settlements. He lost the trail and was four and a half days without anything to eat, and a half days wireds anything care-though owing to the weather, he never suf-fered from thirst, and would have been more confortable had he been provided with blankets and matches. In his wanderings he came to Coal creek and found a cabin, down the chimney of which he descended in search of food but found none. He finally built a raft and floated down the creek to the Nehalem river, where he found an Indian ranch and, probably fortunately for him, a small of provisions as in his famished state supply of provisions as in his lamished state he would certainly have eaten enough to have killed him. In his travels before reaching the creek he had torn nearly all the clothes off him, and he was afraid to leave the creek to hunt for the trail. The Indians brought him to a place where his wants were supplied, and to a place where his wants were supplied, and the has returned home. It is safe to wager he will never undersake to travel alone again through the woods of Tillamook.

Breaking Colts.

Colts should be broken toharness at three years old, and used in light work for two years, when they will become matured and fit for full work. If they are used for hard service before their joints become settled, or surrounded by a full-grown texture of muscle and sinews to support them, they are liable to become strained, causing spavins, or bony enlargements, that will destroy their future usefulness. Any imbecile can break down the colt; but it requires good sense to build them up after they have been crippled by ignorant taskmasteas. It is not worth while to risk the experiment of converting sound colts into invalids, when they will live longer and perform more service if suffered to ripen into the full-matured horse before being put to nard work .- Corr. The idea rose out of his familiarity with the daily routine, not of bees only, but of hens. Hens, he observed, retire to rest early; bees seek repose earlier still. No sooner are they sunk in slumber than the moth steels into their abode and devours the produce of their toil. He has now built a stand of hives with a hen house above it. The bees first betake themselves to their dwellings and settle themselves for the night. The hens then come home to roost on their perch. and, as they take their places upon it, their weight sets some simple mechanism to work, which at once shuts down the doors of all the nives. When the day dawns, however, the nens leave their roosts and the removal of their weight from the perch raises the hive doors and gives egress to the bees in time for

COQUILLE RIVER

Farms with but little improvements can be purchased at a very reasonable price, but the improved farms are held at respectable figures. There are three grist mills on the Coquille river and the machinery for another was consumed by fire last week, which we presume will be reconstructed. There are also four saw mills in active operation on the river. The entrance to the Coquille is about 18 miles south of Cape Argo in this county, while the entrance to Coos Bay is about a mile north of the Cape. Salmon are caught in large numbers on the Coquille while the salmon which enter the bay except enough for market here, are permitted to return to the ocean from lack of enterprise.

ON COOS BAY

Four saw milis run steadily and ship a large quantity of lumber to San Francisco. Three vessels have already been built here this year, and one is now being constructed at this place. There is also a stave factory at Empire City. We have six coal mines on the bay, only one which is at present shipping coal,on account of the depression in the prices and the high freights.

COOS RIVER Is a tributary to the bay and along it banks are many very good farms, which in the majority of cases, have been cleared and improved through the energy and perseverance of the present occupants, who have made for themselves comfortable homes and an easy means of subsistence with the luxuries which a good farm affords. Fruit and vegetables are raised in abundance and are superior in size and quality to any produced in the Eastern States. crops of wheat, oats, barley and hay are harvested yearly, and a general failure of crops has not yet been recorded. Wages in the logging camps range from $40 to $60 per month and board to or dinary hands, during the greater portion of Spring, Summer and Autumn, but in Winter most of the camps are shut down and many of the men work in the saw mills at low wages and very unsatisfactory time. In conclusion if you wish to settle in this locality come and judge for yourself, what satisfies us may not suit you; stay a month or two, visit every portion of the county and when you find a location that suits you, halt, and we'll guarantee that you will be surrounded with good, honest and hospitable neighbors.-Coos Bay
