POUND DEAD.

Mrs. Mary Sullivan, a dissipated and degraded woman, nearly 50 years of age, was found dead about 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon in a room over the Beehive saloon on Fifth street, near Oak. She is the woman who was sent to the pesthouse sometime since, and it being ascertained that she was not suffering from smallpox, was discharged. On Wednesday evening word was brought to Chief Lappens that she was sick at the place above mentioned, and he called to see her. She complained that she could not stand and had lost the use of her legs. Yesterday about noon Chief Lappens saw Mr. Sulhvan and informed him of where his wife was and that she wanted to see him. He went to the place, and on opening the door, the dead body of the woman was found in a sitting position against the wall. There were several severe bruises and two or three slight cuts on the body and blood on the bes clot ing and floor. As she had been drinking to excess for several days it is probable that she was suffering from delirium, and in her paroxysms, had fallen and of grass and green thing close down, and every bruised herself, and the cuts were inflicted by some tin vessels which were on the floor. The scene in the miserable room, which was destitute of furniture, except a wretched bed, beggars description. The place is one of the vilest dens in the city, haunted by the lowest and most depraced of both sexes, and of all every one as soon as it touches the ground.

Sheep in Orchards.

Practical Former: We have frequently recommended sheep in orchards for the destruction of the codling worm, as well as to keep them closely grazed by feeding on the grass and to enrich the ground with their droppings, and the subject is of sufficient importance to bear many repetitions. We find in an exchange an a count of the successful treatment of an orchard, without giving the name of the owner, but from the statement it is evidently that of J. S. Woodward, of Lockport. The following is briefly the substance of the statement: The orchard occupies 32 acres, and is made the run of 30 hogs and 150 or 200 sheep and lambs during Summer. Enough grain and bran is given them to place them in good condition. They eat every blade fallen apple as soon as dropped, for which purpose sheep are better than hogs, which The fruit each year grows fairer, and fewer of the trees. To prevent the animals gnawing the bark the trunks are washed once a month with a mixture of soap-suds, whale oil and sheep manure. If the animals are given a constant supply of fresh water they have less disposition to eat the bark. The profits of this system consist in placing the sheep in the best condition, in finely growing lambs and in heavy crops of fruit for market.

Autumn-Planted Potatoes.

Last October 1 asked some questions about planting potatoes, which were kindly answered in the Journal, and I was requested to send the results of the experiments that I was then about to try. The potatoes were planted the first week in October about six inches deep, they were well covered with dry, decayed manure, and the holes were then filled with soil. The tubers were not cnt, and the variety was E rly Rose. In due time the shoots appeared, and were much injured by the late frosts; the foliage never looked healthy after, and there were ten per cent, blanks in the rows. The potatoes were ready to lift the second week in July, but the crop was not heavy, many of the tubers being very small, most of the large tubers very ill-shaped, and when cooked they were close in substance, which I attributed to deep planting. So much for Autumnplanted potatoes. By way of test, at the end of March I planted one row of the same variety close to the others. The frost did not affect them, as they were not so forward, and it was surprising how they grew and took the lead. There was not a blank in the row, and they were ready to lift the first week in July, the crop being heavier, the tubers larger, with fewer small ones amongst them than was the case with the Autumn needful to feed them well and place them in the full sunlight, and not where they will be shaded by trees or shrubs; and after they have bloomed prune them closely, also when they commence to leaf out in the early Spring. The beds in which they are planted must be made very rich with well decomposed composite, dug in to the depth of at least two feet. In making a rose-bed, fill it in with good ordure well rolled; then add six in foot of very rich soil with a mixture of sand. After the plants are set out, mulch them with tobacco stems, which will help keep them from the aphis, or with long litter from the stable. This will keep their roots moist and cool during the heated term, and make healthy growth of brauches and flowers. After the June flowering has passed, all monthly roses should be severely pruned and the new growth cut back two or more inches also, the old branches should be cut away, The handsomest flowers always spring from fresh growth from the roots, and to make these start vigorously the knife should be vigorously used. For a few weeks your pets may seem shorn of their glery, but soon they will renew their beauty and give you plenty of flowers, while if you permit the seed-buds to form it will stop the blossoming in a great degree. As each rose fades away, therefore, cut it off; or, better yet, cut it while in its loveliness, and if you have plenty in the house, send it to some one who does not possess such floral riches. From the branches which are pruned away new plants can be raised, which will also delight your friends if you will give them away. A true flower lover is always generous with flowers, and takes as much pleasure in giving them to others as in raising them. As a general rule, all cuttings should be cut off just below a bud or joint, and they should be from young growth rather than from the old, where the bark has become hardened. Try to snap the branch. If it bends without breaking, it is too old to grow easily, but if it snaps off at once it is in the right condition to take root quickly.

Leave one or two buds above the bottom one, and trim off one or more of the lower leaves, as they wilt easily, and thus injure the cutting. Clear sand kept very moist is the best soil in which to strike cuttings, and they can be placed in a pot only an inch apart, and put in the shade for a few days. Warmth, an even temperature and moisture are essential for root growth. It will take from three to four weeks to develop the rects, and then the plants can be placed in a rich soil with a little sand to lighten it, and soon they will be good stocky plants. - Daisy Eyebright.
