"Lo" UNDER INSTRUCTIONS.—David Davis, the Indian arrested for unmercifully spurring his fiery untamed steed while hastening from his home, on Grand Ronde Reservation, to this city in obedience to a subpoena served on him by One Arm Brown, Deputy U. S. Marshal, ordering him to appear forthwith as an evildoer in the U. S. court came up for trial in the police court yesterday. The testimony was plain and conclusive that the horse had been abused and the prisoner, through the aid of Mr. F. Clarno, gave his statement of the affair in classic Chinook. The Judge sentenced him to 20 days in jail, remarking that probably the early training of David had been sadly neglected and that he had never been subject to the ameliorating influence of humane societies and was therefore excusable to a certain extent, but under the idea that the present was a good time to instruct him, and that a slight punishment might have a good effect on his future life, he gave him the dose above mentioned.

FRANZEL FALL. From a gentleman who resides near St. Helens comes the report, says the East Portland Indicator, of a peculiar accident last week just above the Scappoose river. A man named George Somers was engaged in cutting logs for a logging camp and had fallen a tree that stood below a cliff about twenty-five feet in height. The tree fell toward the cliff, and the top being heavier than the body of the tree, raised the body so as to let it project out and over the precipice. Somers went up to cut the first log off, and stood on the tree while he cut it in two. After he had chopped awhile, the great weight caused the tree to part where he had weakened it with the axe, and it broke off suddenly, letting him down the entire distance before he was aware what had happened. The fall, and the sudden striking upon the rocks and logs below, broke three of his ribs and tore them from his backbone, and otherwise injuring him. He was properly cared for, and at last accounts was recovering.
