[Editorial Correspondence.] NORTH OF SNAKE RIVER.

South of Snake river is the Walla Walla region and the country beyond there from the Blue Mountains to the river is a continuation of the same rich wheat belt...

wheat will in some localities do fairly. He our assurance that, if farmers will put in fall wheat properly they will have sure crops. Wherever fall wheat was sown...

a bunch of white winter wheat, well headed and good length, sown in November, that he expected would go 30 bushels. He showed a stool of 30 heads of Australian club, almost ripe, that he said went 50 bushels last year...

trne. There is no more deceiving country in the world than these river canyons and the desert shores of these rivers. You seem to be in a region without possibilities of sustaining life...

considerable, notwithstanding the dry season and the newness of things, but I could get no intelligent idea of the area in grain nor the probable surplus.

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED. COTTONWOOD, W. T., June 12. Editor Willamette Farmer: Will you please answer the following queries through the FARMER: What is your opinion of Males "Perfection" Riding Saw and the Monarch Lightning Saw...

[Editorial Correspondence.] THE PALOUSE.

COLFAX, W. T., July 6, 1883.

It is a rather fearful trip to take in midsummer, this journeying through the Upper Country beneath the hot sun and over the dusty roads. It is more than I had bargained for, though the information to be gained now is worth more than at any other season.

At Almoda I met Mr. L. M. Ringer, who does an immense business with farmers on both sides of the river. He had lately traveled over the farming region between Moscow and Colfax and the river, and said that while farmers complain of the dry season somewhat they are not discouraged...

C. S. Mason, who resides at the head of Rebel Flat, has seventy-five acres of grain sown on summer fallow last year, which now stands about four feet and a half high, and which will average from 45 to 55 bushels to the acre.
