ORCHARD NOTES.

Danger from frost seems almost over for orchards. The trees have generally leaved out so well that the foliage can protect the fruit. It is not the frost that kills the fruit but the melting of the frost by the sun does the injury.

ONIONS AS A CROP.

It is not too late as yet to plant onions and we call consideration to the value of onions as a crop for the farm, a crop that will not require much land to pay a large return if it succeeds well.

of these pieces show any ill effects from this long continued cropping. As weeds are the chief enemy of this crop, it is not policy to change the ground oftener than is necessary.

NEW STRAWBERRIES.

Editor Willamette Farmer: With your good will I will say a few words of some of our new strawberries. Here let me say it is much to be regretted that so many new and untested kinds are thrown upon the credulous people; for, it seems, as Barnum says, "people love to be humbugged, and are willing to pay for it, too."

Lincoln, Prince of Berries, Atlantic, Jumbo, or "Latest of All," and some others of less note. The last three I have great hopes of.

Whew! Hurrah for Durand and his Prince of Berries. What more do we want in a berry? The other two, I would give their description as it would rob us of all the descriptive words in our language.

Send us $5 and we will send you the FARMER one year, and also to two new subscribers.
