Canning Fruit.

All fruit used for canning should be fresh, but not over-ripe. Berries should be firm, and peaches and pears must be canned before they are mellow. It is not absolutely necessary to use sugar when canning. Granulated sugar is undoubtedly the best. Our rule is a quarter of a pound of granulated sugar for every pound of fruit, but for currants and cherries we use a little more, and for peaches a little less. Put your fruit and sugar together in a porcelain kettle, adding a little water if necessary, cook until the fruit is boiling hot clear through, fill the cans while the fruit is hot; wipe the top dry and put on the cover; screw down firmly, and as the fruit cools tighten the cover until it can be moved no further. If you notice any air bubbles in the can run a spoon down to them and let the air escape before you put the top on. To prevent breaking the cans, fill them with quite warm water until they are warmed through; then pour out the water, set the cans in a pan containing a little hot water and put in the fruit. Fruits that are apt to mush up by much handling, will look better if cooked in the cans. Fill the cans with fruit, pour over a syrup made by melting the sugar that you intend to use in some water—say from a half a pound to a pound of sugar to a quart of water—put on the glass tops loosely, set the cans in the wash-boiler with cold water enough to come within three inches of the top of the cans. Heat until the fruit is boiling hot, and then boil fifteen minutes longer. The fruit will settle down in the cans, then take the contents of one or two cans to fill up the rest, and seal up immediately. Do not set the cans on the bottom of the boiler. Get John to shape a board a little smaller than the inside of the boiler, bore it full of holes an inch apart, and nail three strips an inch thick across the under side to rest on the bottom of the boiler. Set the cans on this board and they will be all right.

Canned fruit should be kept in a cellar or a cool milk house, but if you have neither, put in dark closet, in the coolest place at command.—Country Gentleman.

The Eucalyptus Tree

When the tree is in blossom it emits a pleasant resinous odor, and in all its stages of growth it is a potent corrective of infectiousness. Planted in the Macremora or the poisonous Campama or in the marshes of Algiers, it draws from the earth its noxious moisture and from the air its pestilential miasma and translates them into a wholesome and pleasant fragrance grateful to the sense as odors of terobinth or myrrh. Providence has hardly bestowed on man a more useful forest growth. It adapts itself to all soils and climates, but thrives best where it is not wanted, in regions where malaria prevails, and where the conditions of atmosphere and soil are prejudicial to health. They are doubtless the highest trees in the world, overtopping even the colossal red cedar of Nevada, a competent authority affirming that they frequently reach a height of 500 feet. This dwarfs all trees—the baobabs of Teneriffe, the great chestnut of Aina, the cyclonee of Banyan, the Brazilian fig and the pines of Puget Sound. There are two kinds of these trees, both equally valuable in correcting malarial conditions of the soil, but differing in the nature of their products, one of them producing a species of resin valuable in commerce, and the other a febrifuge which is thought to be a good substitute for quinine. There are probably a good many places in the East where these magnificent growths might be planted to advantage.

What to Teach the Girls.

Teach them self-reliance. Teach them to make shirts. Teach them to add up bills. Teach them not to paint or powder. Teach them to wear a cheerful smile. Teach them to wear thick, warm clothes. Teach them to wash and iron clothes. Teach them that a dollar is only one hundred cents. Teach them to make their own dresses. Teach them how to cook a good meal. Teach them to darn stockings and sew on buttons. Teach them to say no, and mean it, or yes and stick to it. Teach them to regard the morals, and not the money of beaux. Teach them to wear calico dresses, and do it like a queen. Teach them to wear their own hair, and dress it neatly. Teach them the mysteries of the kitchen, dining room and parlor. Teach them to cultivate a garden, and drive a road team or a farm wagon. Teach them to have nothing to do with intemperate and dissolute young men. Teach them that the more one lives beyond their income the nearer they get to the poorhouse.—Recepter.

DR. JAYNE'S AGUE MIXTURE.

A CERTAIN AND EFFECTUAL REMEDY FOR Fever and Ague, Intermittent and Remittent Fevers, &c.

This class of diseases so common in all parts of the World, and especially prevalent in malarious districts and vicinages of water-courses, are almost invariably accompanied by more or less derangement of the liver, and frequently by a defective action of the digestive organs. The mere breaking of the Chill is but a step towards completing a radical cure; the various organs of the body, especially the stomach and liver, must be brought to a healthy and vigorous condition before a permanent cure can be established, and this fact has been specially kept in view by Dr. Jayne in his treatment of these complaints. The use of Jayne's Ague Mixture, in conjunction with Jayne's Sensitive Pills, as prescribed in the Directions which accompany each bottle, will not only

BREAK UP THE CHILLS.

but restore the system, wear particularly the liver and stomach, to a sound condition, and so prevent a relapse of Fever and Ague by thoroughly and the best evidence of this is the invariable success which has always followed the administration of these remedies, as attested by the certificates published annually in Dr. Jayne's Almanac, and the wide-spread popularity of the Ague Mixture in those districts of the United States, where the disease, for which it is adapted, most prevails.
