their way to town (it was their custom to talk very little now, except business required it); indeed, Mrs. Master was too much excited to trust her voice, even if she had had the courage to say any-

A Severe Lesson-

The team of well-feed, sleek, lively horses stood before the road wagon at Jason Master's door. Farmer Master was going to the market town, and his wife was going with him—an event which occurred about once in five years.

She was desperate; she would take ten yards, she told the clerk. At seventy-five cents a yard, that would be seven dollars and fifty cents, and the butter and cheese were worth at least ten dollars. After the goods had been cut and tied in a neat package, she told the clerk that she would call again for it,

Stonewall Jackson's Pillage of Manassas Junction.

Allen C. Redwood, the artist, was "With Jackson's Foot Cavalry at the Second Manassas;" and from his account in the February Century we quote as follows: "All this time we had the vaguest notions as to our objective; at first we had expected to strike the enemy's flank, but as the march pro-

How, and How Long to Sleep.

It is often a question among persons who are acquainted with the anatomy and physiology of man, whether lying with the head exalted, or even with the body, is the most wholesome. Most consulting their own ease on this point,
