Poor, Foolish John,

My cousin John got married

About two years ago—

It might be nigh on three years,

I don't exactly know—

But t'other day it struck me

That I'd 'round 'n' find

Out what he thought concernin'

Things I had on my mind.

An' when we talked a little

It seemed to me as tho

The feller'd lost his senses—

He kept a smilin' so

I told him that the nation

Was goin' all to smash.

I told him that the magnets

Was gittin' all the cash;

I told him that conditions

Was gittin' worse an' worse—

I told him we were under

The money power's curse.

He didn't seem to worry

About the trusts at all—

Seemed more concerned a-watchin'

His baby learn to crawl!

I told him people's freedom

Was uittig' took away—

Durn fool! He set there grinnin'

Without a word to say.

I told him of the danger

The ship of state was in—

His wife set there beside him—

The fool could only grin

And say: "Look there, Amanda!

Just see the rascal go!

I'll bet you he'll be walkin'

In 'nother week or ss!"

And then he got to pattin'

Her blushing cheeks an' they

Set there 'n' smiled 'n' giggled

While I went on to say

That trouble was a-brewin'—

The sky was gittin' black—

That danger was before us—

We'd got sweep it back!

I told him that the nation

Was goin' all to smash—

I told him that the magnets

Was gittin' all the cash;

He put an arm around her,

And as I came away

He run outside 'n' hollered:

"He's ten months old today!"

I tried to do my duty!

But no, he couldn't see—

My golly! It's surprisin'

What fools some folks can be!
