Perhaps you have something to sell—a farm, a team, farm machinery? You may wish to buy something. The best possible way to communicate with people who wish to buy or sell is by inserting a small advertisement in the Spokesman-Review. The price is the same in the daily and the twice-a-week.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

"Belling" a tree—that is, killing it by destroying the bark in a circle around the trunk—injures it for lumber.

Statistics recently published in Paris show clearly that good surroundings afford comparative immunity from pulmonary tuberculosis.

The British black rat, almost entirely exterminated during the last 100 years by the brown Norwegian rat, is carefully protected and preserved on an estate at Greenleaf, Montgomery.

The mining of phosphate rock is one of the important industries of Florida and South Carolina, and it amounts to 1,500,000 tons a year, valued at $5,200,000 at the point of production.

Under the auspices of the Institute of France further researches are being made in the famous grottoes of Mentone, on the Riviera, where bones and other remains of prehistoric men have at various times been found. Late-ly three entire skeletons have been discovered.

An American syndicate has just bought the old McKeanie concession to supply the City of Mexico with water. The water will be brought from the Ajmoioya springs, 40 miles southwest of the capital. The work will include 16 miles of canal, six miles of steel piping and the installation of motive power.

The Chicago board of local improvements has decided to use creosoted block for pavements in that city. Different kinds of material for paving were looked into by the board, but the decision was in favor of the wood. The first order of this kind of pavement will aggregate about 150 miles of streets to be paved.

Everything we eat and drink and wear runs the gauntlet of germs to an extent which nervous people had better not contemplate. For too much fuss is made of them. If we listened to all these scares there would be nothing left to do but to get into a bath of carbolic acid and stop there until starvation freed us from the dangers of life.

THE GAMBLING EVIL.

American Baseball League Strikes Hard Blow at It.

Should Also Stop Sale of Liquor—Factions of the National Sport Opposed to the Ordinary Prosecution of Intoxicated Men.

President Ban Johnson, of the American baseball league, asked his brother magnates to strike a blow at the gambling evil which in some baseball cities of the circuit has assumed remarkable proportions. He did not take the league season long to legislate against this practice. Behind Mr. Johnson's commendable action lies a story which illustrates how the fearless executive of the league came to realize to what an extent baseball could be robbed of its interest by betting.

When a well-known ex-ball player requested Mr. Johnson to put him on the list of American league umpires, the jolly, rotund president gave him a look calculated to wither the applicant.

"No, sir," replied Mr. Johnson, "I have no use for a man who would bet and throw a game. You did that years ago when pitch ag in a game in which I was the catcher. If you will throw a game in a country I take to get you to make dishonest decisions in an American league game? This league has no use for such men as you are. I am determined that as long as I have anything to do with professional baseball the game shall be free from gambling. If men will gamble, let them stick to cards and horse races. Baseball will be the national sport of this country so long as the republic lives—and that will be forever."

The seeker for the office of umpire retired without making a reply. He recalled the day down in Ohio when his team played a climax game with CARE OF THE WET UMBRELLA.

Uncle Hiram Tells His Grandnephew What His Own Grandfather Had Told Him.

"My grandfather told me about it," said Uncle Hiram, according to the New York Sun, "but now my grandnephew asks me why we stand a wet umbrella to drip not tip but handle downward."

"I told my grandnephew that the reason for standing a wet umbrella on its handle rather than on its tip is that if it were stood on its tip more or less of the water on it running down the sides would, instead of running off, settle in the folds of the cloth around where the bows are joined to the stick and water-soak that part of the cloth which would remain wet or damp longer than the rest, and so have a tendency to rot and break."

"I have seen many an umbrella with a ragged-edge little hole around the stick at the top that had been caused by the cloth decaying there from this cause; but you don't see so many of these nowadays as you used to for the simple reason that people are more intelligent nowadays about the care of umbrellas, as they are about all things else."

"Still, there's my grandnephew, a bright youngster, certainly, and he didn't know, and there must be others; and for their benefit Uncle Hiram says, as to how to stand a wet umbrella when you bring it in from outdoors: "Stand it on the handle."

MANY LETTERS LOST.

Recent Post Office Reports Show a Big Increase in Number.

Indication of Greater Carelessness on the Part of Senders—Work of the Dead Letter Department Largely Increased.

The belief that the people are more careful now than they were five years ago as to the addressing of letters is not borne out by the report of the dead-letter office, says the Chicago Inquirer. The receipts of mail matter at that office were 5,307,251 pieces for the year ending June 30, 1901, against 5,336,135 pieces in 1900, an increase in one year of over 12 per cent. The ordinary unclaimed letters numbered 4,931,407 in 1901, an increase of 548,007 over 1900.

There were received at the dead-letter office in 1901 unregistered packages to the number of 433,386, an increase of 252,472 over 1900. The ordinary unclaimed packages numbered 315,425, against 74,434 for 1900, an increase of 240,991. Of the letters opened 47,422 contained $42,854 in money, $1,359,965 contained drafts, notes, money orders, deeds, wills and mortgages, having a face value of $1,178,970. Of the letters and parcels opened 47,796 contained photographs and 179,849 postage stamps. Of the letters held for 24 hours 107,119 to addresses in the United States. The misdirected letters numbered 454,884, and the parcels 13,324. There were 39,837 letters without addresses, 15,843 envelopes containing money found loose in the mails, and 103,640 letters sent to fictitious addresses.

Of the great mass of matter received at the dead-letter office 4,701,169 letters and circulars, 44,711 parcels and 19,042 letters containing postage stamps were destroyed; 24,738 letters containing money, 36,643 containing drafts and money orders, 47,549 containing postage stamps, 47,725 containing photographs, and 1,900,816 containing nothing of value were delivered to the persons for whom they were intended, and 6,339 letters containing money or drafts and photographs were returned to the writers.

Unclaimed addressed parcels to the number of 27,234, and 25,087 without address, were sold at public auction for $3,732, and 33,362 magazines were distributed among charitable institutions in Washington. Of the misdirected letters, 60,952 of domestic origin and 17,559 foreign were delivered to corrected addresses. Foreign letters and parcels to the number of 749,831 were returned to the countries from which they were mailed. Of all the letters and packages received at the dead-letter office 996,904 were returned or delivered unopened. Foreign post offices returned 3,276 registered letters, 361,924 ordinary letters and 195,380 parcels to the dead-letter office as undeliverable, and the dead-letter office returned 85,000 letters to Austria-Hungary, 114,000 to Canada, 88,000 to Great Britain, 74,000 to Italy and 71,800 to Russia.

It is easy to understand how letters written abroad may be misdirected or may be sent out with imperfect addresses, but it is not so easy to understand why even registered letters and letters containing money and drafts should be sent wrong in Chicago and other cities of the United States.

"JOHN BROWN PAPERS" FOUND

Letters Which Were Written to the Noted Abolitionist Have Recently Been Discovered.

The Richmond (Va.) papers print what are known as recently discovered "John Brown papers," which were found in a lot of rubbish in the state library. It cannot be said that they throw any additional light on the John Brown raid into Virginia, which resulted in his arrest and execution. There is not a scratch of John Brown's pen among them. They are of two classes, letters to Brown and his fellow prisoners, and letters throughout the country. The prisoners, it is supposed, never saw the letters sent to them, and the letters written by them were never mailed.

Those to Brown and his associates are for the most part signed with initials only, and no prominent persons can be identified with them. They are largely from correspondents in New England, Ohio and Indiana. Two letters to Brown from his sister Elizabeth are both poetic and pathetic, and it is evident she had no conception of the fate that was in store for him. From marks on all, it is shown that they were inspected by Andrew Hunter, of the prosecution, or Gov. Wise. What value there is in the letters, if any, lies in their showing the widespread sympathy throughout the north with John Brown's desperate venture. The letters from the prisoners tell nothing.

Search is now being made for a carpet bag of Brown's, said to be hidden in the roof of the capitol building, and to contain his diary and some of his documents. Many, however, doubt the existence of such a historical "treasure trove."

Several letters in the upturned batch, and written from the north, expressed pleasure that Brown had been captured. It is not at all certain that some of the letters have not been published before. In not a few cases the letters to Brown and his band are written in red ink.

BLOODY FIGHT OF EAGLES.

A Royal Pair in the New York Zoo Engage in a Fierce Contest.

At the zoo in Central park, New York, there was a fierce and bloody fight the other day. The outcome, it is feared, may prove fatal to the male eagle, who provoked the battle. No one knows just how it started, but it may have been a scurrilous remark about the personal appearance of his mighty mate that drew down her wrath upon the luckless male—anyway, they fought.

Loud screams and angry thrashings in the cage first drew the keeper's attention when he discovered a frightful mix-up. The great curved beaks tore, the powerful talons struck and cut, the powerful wings beat and pommelled as the pair rolled in conflict on the floor. There was a brown nimbus of down and feathers in the air about them.

The female is much the larger and more powerful bird, says the New York Times, and at last succeeded in vanquishing her partner. He, poor, battered, featherless wretch, presented a pitiable sight when rescued by his keeper, though his eyes still flashed defiantly and his weak voice shrieked audibly hatred at his conqueror. It was feared he would never recover.

DUKE OF HAMILTON.

Premier Peer of Scotland Married to Miss Nina Poore, a Famous English Beauty.

The duke of Hamilton was married to Miss Nina Poore at Salisbury a few days ago. The ceremony took place at noon. Only half a dozen relatives were present. Two little girls acted as bridesmaids. No reception followed the wedding and there was an entire absence of the elaborate ceremonies usually attending such occasions.

Alfred Douglas Hamilton, duke of Hamilton, marquis of Douglas and Clydebank, earl of Angus, Lennox and Selkirk, lord of ten manors in Scotland and duke of Brandon of England, is 39 years old and the thirty-ninth in line of the dukedom. This noble is one of the few who retain the medieval ducal privileges of a private army and a private chaplain. He owns 157,000 acres and lives in one of the finest palaces in Europe. Outside of his lofty place in the peerage the present duke has done nothing to gain fame. Miss Poore, his bride, is a relative of Maj. Poore, who married Lady Flora Hamilton in 1898.

This is an excellent and economical dish, but too often comes to the table with the most dry and tasteless, and the stuffing a soggy mass. The meat should be taken from the upper round, and should be fully 2 1/2 inches thick. Have the butcher cut a pocket in the steak, which may be stuffed with a mixture of one cupful of fine bread crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of sausage meat, and one tablespoonful each of onions and mushrooms finely chopped. Season well with salt and pepper, fasten with toothpicks and brown all over in a little hot fat in a deep skillet. Pour in sufficient boiling water to stand a half-inch deep in the pan; cover closely, and simmer very slowly for three hours, adding more water as it boils away.
