

KIDNEY TROUBLE CURED.

General Health Greatly Improved by Pe-ru-na.

MRS. M. J. DANLEY.

Mrs. M. J. Danley, Treasurer of the Rebecca Lodge, I. O. O. F., writes from 124 First St. N., Minneapolis, Minn.: "I was afflicted for several years with kidney trouble which became quite serious and caused me considerable anxiety. I spent hundreds of dollars trying to be cured, but nothing gave me any permanent relief until I tried Pe-ru-na. It took less than three months and only ten bottles to effect a permanent cure, but they were worth more than as many hundred dollars to me. I am fully restored to health, know neither ache nor pain and enjoy life."—Mrs. M. J. Danley.

This experience has been repeated many times. We hear of such cases nearly every day.

Mrs. Danley had catarrh of the kidneys. As soon as she took the right remedy she made a quick recovery. A prominent Southern Lady's Letter. Miss Laura Hopkins, of Washington, D. C., niece of Hon. E. O. Hopkins, one of the largest iron manufacturers of Birmingham, Ala., writes the following letter commending Pe-ru-na. She says: "I can cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na for indigestion and stomach trouble and as a good tonic."—Laura Hopkins. Pe-ru-na cures catarrh wherever located. Pe-ru-na is a specific for the catarrhal derangements of women. Address The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio, for free book on catarrh written by Dr. S. B. Hartman.

An Unfortunate Croesus. "The very rich have their troubles, too."

"Of course they do. I've got a multimillionaire uncle who has writer's cramp the worst way."

"How did he get it?"

"Sighing checks"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Lost Opportunities. The automobile had broken down and the chauffeur was busy trying to discover the trouble. The impatient owner of the machine at last broke out:

OPINIONS OF GREAT PAPERS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS

Emigration to Canada.

Can American emigrants be "assimilated" to institutions and types of government inferior to those of their native land? That is a question raised by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat in reference to the American emigration to the western provinces of British America. It is very much to be doubted whether the institutions and types of government which the American emigrant will find in Canada will impress him as all-informing to those of his own country. He certainly will find that they guarantee quite as large a liberty as those of his native land, and that the monarchical element which is supposed to be injected into the Canadian government by its nominal relations to the British Crown is, so far as its practical influence in the affairs of the Government is concerned, a legal fiction. Nevertheless it is quite possible that any large American emigration to the Northwest British provinces might prove a disturbing political factor. Not because the Americans would be all discontented with the political institutions of the country, which in some respects are freer and better ordered than our own, but because they would add a new impulse to the growth of opinion that the interests of that region would be greatly promoted by annexation to the United States if annexation shall prove to be the only means of removing the obstacles to free commerce and intercourse. At present sentiment of loyalty to the British Crown is so strong among the British Canadians that the motives of self-interest which prompt their occasional consideration of better and closer relations with the United States are held in abeyance. But this sentiment would probably be gradually weakened by a large infusion of American elements in the population of Northwest Canada. So that although Canadian experience heretofore has been that American immigrants very readily assimilate with their Canadian cousins and adapt themselves to Canadian institutions, they have heretofore been known in Canada rather as transient visitors than permanent settlers, and the latter at least have been too few in number to have any particular influence on Canadian politics. But if they get to going to Canada in large numbers they are likely to precipitate problems which Canadian statesmen desire above all things to avoid, or at least to postpone.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Men with Small Capital.

It has been objected by some that technical education should not be fostered with public funds because the fields for its employment are being rapidly preempted by the trusts and gigantic combinations of capital in manufacturing and other productive technical industries. Frequently we are told that the man who has only skill and small capital is put out of the way of business and success by the overshadowing combines. Yet it should be plain to any observer that there are hundreds of profitable technical industries that the trusts have not captured and in the nature of things could not consolidate and control. The profit to be made from them in any given locality is too small to engage the cupidity of a trust and yet is sufficient to amply repay the enterprise and industry of a small operator. Now inventions are creating new industries almost daily and in the exploiting of these the man with technical education and small capital finds plentiful opportunities for steady occupation and satisfactory returns. We find from the census that in 1890 there were 9,977 manufacturing establishments in the city of Chicago. There were 19,203 in 1900, or an increase of nearly 100 per cent. But the average amount of capital to the establishment was 20 per cent less in 1900 than in 1890, which shows that plenty of men found chances to invest their brains, skill and small capital in good enterprises. The trusts do not own all those nearly twenty thousand factories in Chicago, nor the majority in St. Louis, Cincinnati or Atlanta. The truth is that the argument for giving varied technical instruction to the youth of the land was never stronger than to-day.—Atlanta Constitution.

Railroad Teaches a Lesson.

A few weeks ago one of the engines of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad jumped the track and demolished a degenerate sons of hard-working fathers, are making a great change in the matter of hours, beginning the day earlier. The business day has thus been lengthened, not for the paid underlings, whose hours have always been from eight or nine until five or six, but for the men who manage the great transactions in the world's commerce. Not long ago the head of a great house in the lower end of New York City was asked when he could be seen the next day. "I'll be at my desk at seven-thirty in the morning," he answered. "There is no need to get down so early," said the other. "My regular hour," replied the great merchant, "is at there at that time six days in the week."

This merchant is in a business in which quotations from European markets are important to his other houses in the West, and he is getting quotations on the wires while others sleep. The vice-president of a Wall Street bank is at his desk at half past eight every day. The president of a Broadway bank is at his desk at nine in the morning. As he lives up the Hudson, he has to rise at six. One man said that getting to work at eight was the greatest help in the world. He got well started on his day by nine, whereas a few years ago, when he used to arrive at his office late, there seemed to be no morning left in which to accomplish anything worth while. "Then, too," he added, "I get the invigorating morning air. By the time I get to my office I have heard the birds sing and have had the early sunshine. I have met not a few in the glow of health, which tends to inspire me."

Benefits that Modern Business Men Begin to Realize.

A few years ago nearly all wealthy men, bankers, brokers, the heads of great establishments, did their work between ten and three. The New York Sun tells us that the younger business men, who are often accused of being Church Entertainment.

The prediction lately made by a minister in one of the Western cities—Chicago, we believe—to the effect that the only way in which it would soon be possible to maintain an interest in church work would be by means of "the continuous vendeville," started a great many conservative church goers, and possibly shocked some of them. However, the social opportunities to be had by the stream of tendency seem to have settled rather strongly in the direction of a fulfillment of this prophecy. Billiards, ping-pong, hops, amateur theatricals, secular concerts, legere drama, charades, socials, fairs, suppers, primarily for purposes of revenue, music, of the sort between the sacred and secular in music; all of these have come to be recognized as adjuncts of more or less value to the work. The standing order seems to be to make the church an attractive social club, and thus bring within its sphere of influence many who value a church connection at the outset chiefly for the social opportunities it offers. It would be difficult to find a serious objection to this view of so much of the work of a church as may properly be considered secondary. There may be a line which it lies beyond which is as difficult to define as is the Alaskan boundary.—New York Times.

These Need Encouragement.

The person who really needs the attention of the school commencement speaker is the man who has passed his college days and has found to his dismay that the world is not what he expected. He is the individual whose mind has stopped growing and who "flourished" when he left his high school academy or college. A successful professor assured him at the time that his education would prove invaluable to him. He looks back and fails to see where it has advanced him. He has forgotten most of what he learned. He has forgotten most of the generalizations. He would be at a loss to extract the square root of any number greater than 5 per cent. Since the partial abolition of railroads on grade and the introduction of fenders on cars, six years ago, deaths from this source have decreased 12.6 per cent.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Prospect of Longevity.

Timid people and pessimists are inclined to fear that the progress of invention is increasing the dangers of accident and disease to such an extent that human life must necessarily be shortened. This fear appears to be groundless. Collected statistics show that the average duration of life is steadily increasing. Some interesting and striking facts along this line are presented in a recent report of the Chicago board of health. The average duration of life for men has increased in more than thirty years. Exclusive of suicides, deaths from violence have decreased 6.3 per cent. Deaths from railroad accidents have decreased 5 per cent. Since the partial abolition of railroads on grade and the introduction of fenders on cars, six years ago, deaths from this source have decreased 12.6 per cent.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Marriage Not a Failure.

Is marriage a failure? The answer is in the wide-staring eyes of that dimpled bundle in the cradle. Marriage a failure? Ask that young mother as she faced little woman in black over there as she kisses the cheeks of her stalwart son, and sends him into the world to conquer. Ask that young mother as she looks at the gray-bearded victim of a business collapse. An arm steals about his neck, and a wrinkled hand strokes his brow, and the sweetest lips he ever knew whisper words of soulful sympathy and courage in his ear. Ask him about marriage.—Cincinnati Post.

Importations of Cattle.

Importations of cattle was the means of establishing the famous native cattle herds of the West Indies and Mexico and the long horned herds of Texas. The wild horses of the plains were similarly founded.

Hen-Pecked Sparrows.

Female sparrows are especially tyrannical toward their partners, especially at nest-building time, when they frequently attack their husbands fiercely on account of their laziness. At such times the female voice can always be detected, both louder and shriller than that of her mate, as she pecks and tosses him, until he beats an ignominious retreat. Hen-patched birds and their mates are often very overbearing and even spiteful toward their mates when their houses are in course of construction.

Intoxicating Beans.

Among the products of Southern Italy, Sicily and Sardinia a curious malady has been noticed by physicians, which is caused by eating beans. One of the most remarkable effects of the malady is a species of intoxication resembling that produced by alcoholic drink. In some cases persons predisposed to the malady are seized with symptoms of intoxication if they pass a field where the bean plants are in flower, the odor alone sufficing to affect them.

What English Will Do.

A report in a Missouri paper is quoted in the Chicago Chronicle as an example of what queer tricks the English language will play on one who does not master it. At a recent church entertainment the master of ceremonies announced: "Miss Bates will sing, 'Oh! That I had wings like a dove, for then would I fly away and be at rest,' accompanied by the minister."
